CEMENT TRUCK FLIPS, DRIVER ESCAPES SERIOUS INJURY

The driver of a cement truck stands bandaged and bewildered by his massive vehicle, overturned on the south Novato onramp to Highway 101. The driver, Arthur Jones, 64, of 7301 Betita Avenue, Rohnert Park, was later reported in satisfactory condition in Novato General Hospital with head cuts and abrasions following the accident at 8:15 a.m. today. It took three tow trucks three hours to upright the mammoth vehicle, which is owned by the Camgros Fuel and Gravel Co. of San Rafael, according to the California Highway Patrol. There was no estimate of damage. Traffic was scarcely impeded. (Independent-Journal photo by Bob Hax)

Food Prices Are Raised By Higher Livestock Prices

Unemployment Drops To Lowest Point In Last Twenty Months

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new surge in livestock prices pushed wholesale food prices up for the second month in a row in June, the government announced today, but the nation's unemployment rate dropped sharply to its lowest point in 20 months.

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said a 4.7 per cent increase in livestock prices was the main reason for a 1 per cent rise in the wholesale price of consumer foods last month. It came on the heels of a 1.3 per cent hike in May after two months of sharp declines.

Unemployment, however, dipped from 5.9 per cent to 5.5 per cent in June. The 0.4 per cent drop brought joblessness to its lowest level since October, 1970. It was the first time since then that unemployment had not hovered near the 6 per cent mark.

The big jump in wholesale meat and food prices had been anticipated by the administration and led President Nixon to clamp price controls on farm products and lift the import quotas on meat in an effort to stem a price rise for consumers.

Dr. Ezra Solomon of the President's Council of Economic Advisers said he did not feel the wholesale price rise imperiled the administration's goal of reducing inflation to less than 3 per cent a year by the end of 1970.

Solomon also told reporters the White House was still predicting unemployment would diminish to 5 per cent or less by the end of the year.

The BLS explained that the 5.5 per cent unemployment rate was seasonally adjusted to compensate for the normal big influx of students into the labor force during the summer vacation.

The actual number of unemployed persons increased 1.1 million in June to 5.4 million, but this was less than usual for June and therefore the jobless percentage figure went down after seasonal adjustment.

Officials said most of the decline in unemployment occurred among workers aged 16 to 24 and that the teenage jobless rate dropped from 15.7 to 14.5 per cent, the lowest in almost two years.

The report showed the overall Wholesale Price Index increased 0.5 per cent in June, a rate slightly less than the 0.6 per cent advance in May but greater than the 0.1 per cent increases in the two previous months. Industrial commodity prices went up 0.3 per cent, the same as in May and about average for the past two years.

But wholesale prices of farm products and food reflected their second consecutive month of sharp increases. The index for farm products in processed foods and feeds went up 1.1 per cent in June, slightly over the 1 per cent increase for consumer foods. Non-food consumer items recorded a 0.3 per cent increase in June.

On the food front, live poultry prices shot up 6.9 per cent, livestock prices increased 4.7 per cent, processed meats, poultry and fish advanced 3.6 per cent, egg prices went up 1.4 per cent and fresh and dried fruits and vegetables iccreased 0.9 pe cent.

Wholesale prices for dairy products went down 1.8 per cent and grain prices declined 3.1 per cent.

Peace Offer By Demo Insurgents

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Chicago's insurgents, having ousted Mayor Richard Daley, offered today to make peace and seek a compromise on the seating of a delegation at the Democratic National Convention.

But William Singer, leader of the 59-member insurgent group, said that Daley "has not changed positions and is adamantly going all the way."

Singer, a Chicago alderman, said the idea of seating both delegations —the Daley group and the insurgents —each with half a vote, "is one that would be worth discussing."

Frontrunner George S. McGovern would stand to lose at least 20 votes under a 50-50 compromise. A McGovern spokesman, Pierre Salinger, said "we are not participating (in any compromise discussion) until the courts clarify the situation.'

Democratic party leaders feared that if Daley were barred from sitting at the convention, President Nixon would sweep Illinois in the fall.

An olive branch was extended by Singer as three major candidates, George C. Wallace, Hubert H. Humphrey and Edmund S. Muskie flew to the convention city, knowing they have to stop George S. McGovern or forfeit their chances for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Wallace left the hospital for the first time since being wounded in an attempted assassination attempt near Washing-

Jury Calls For Police Overhaul

In its final report released today, 1971-72 Marin Grand Jury recommended formation of a countywide police department and professional scrutiny of the sheriff's department.

Of the full report, only portions prepared by the administration of justice committee on the sheriff's department, jail and juvenile court were not previously released.

A majority of the jury wanted a countywide police department, but what foreman Milen C. Dempster called a "very small minority" opposed the recommendation and issued a report of its own.

The majority report said, "The jury suggests that a new consolidated department or several consolidated departments be considered in place of the patrol and inspection (detective) divisions of the sheriff's department and the 11 city police forces."

It recommended that a committee be set up to study such consolidation, which might produce better service at less cost.

The minority of the jury admitted it might be "both economical and wise" to consolidate, but concluded "the idea of

Quiet Surrender Ends Second Skyjack Of PSA

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—A 21-year-old Awol soldier, who hijacked a Pacific Southwest Airlines jetliner for $455,000 ransom, surrendered early today to a highway patrol captain he had taken hostage.

"I told him that as soon as he stepped down the ramp an FBI agent is going to squeeze one off and your head will disintegrate," said California highway patrol officer Lloyd Turner, 42.

The hijacker, identified by the FBI as Francis Goodell, Manassas, Va., handed over two guns and the ransom after two tense hours of waiting in the Boeing 727 on the runway at Oakland airport.

It was the second hijacking of a PSA plane in two days. The FBI killed two gunmen in Wednesday's hijacking at San Francisco International Airport.

Turner, of Sacramento, had been a passenger in plainclothes aboard the plane when it was seized over northern California.

The hijacker took command of the plane while it was flying from Oakland to Sacramento and ordered it to head for San Diego. The airline turned over the ransom at San Diego and the hijacker released all but two of the 57 passengers before forcing the crew to fly to Oakland.

One of the guns Goodell turned over was Turner's service revolver which the patrolman had taken from its holster and placed in a coat pocket.

Turner said he had not been frisked when he got on the aircraft at Sacramento.

"I could have shot him several times but there were women and children on the plane and it could have ruptured the skin of the aircraft," Turner said.

Turner said Goodell told him he was a Vietnam War veteran and complained the Army wouldn't let him marry a girl in Southeast Asia.

Once on the ground in Oakland the hijacker, who had signed the passenger list with the alias of Goodwin M. Harrison, was talked into surrendering and he walked down the rear stairs of the Boeing 727 with his hands raised over his head. FBI agents seized him as soon as he stepped to the ground.

He was wearing a khaki jacket, white shirt and dark pants.

Robert Gebhardt, special agent in charge of the San Francisco FBI office, said Goodell had been absent for two days from Ft. Riley, Kan.

Bond for the hijacker was set at $100,000, and the U.S. Attorney authorized the filing of a charge of air piracy. Turner talked to the bespectacled Goodell for two and a half hours before the young man decided to give himself up.

While the plane sat on the ground at San Diego for several hours as the airline gathered the ransom, the hijacker said he wanted the money for "two organizations involved in the Mideast crisis." He did not name them.,

The ransom was paid with $450,000 in $100 bills, $4,000 in 50's and $1,000 in 10's. The money was delivered in a black satchel with handcuffs wrapped around it. Goodell also demanded and received a parachute.

The plane took off from San Diego at 10:50 p.m., and after circling Oakland airport for nearly an hour, landed at 1 a.m. and the hijacker gave himself up about two hours later.

In addition to Turner, the hijacker took Jim Williams, another passenger, as a hostage. Both Williams and Turner offered to serve as hostages to gain release of the other passengers.

The hijacking was the fifth of a PSA plane this year. The federal government fined the airline $1,000 earlier for one instance of failure to conform to all anti-hijack measures.

Weary Man Victim Of Both Skyjacks

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Franz Lingnau admitted he was still weary and a little "shaky" over being involved in Wednesday's hijacking as he boarded a jetliner yesterday at Burbank for the flight back to Sacramento.

As the Pacific Southwest Airlines Boeing 727 made its approach to the Sacramento airport, "my heart sank," Lingnau said, when that plane was taken over by a skyjacker and he became a hostage for the second time in two days.

"I don't believe it's possible it could have happened on both of them," Lingnau said in an interview today.

"I'd like to know the odds on this. When I realized it was happening again, I was angry. The odds are so far out, it shouldn't have happened for another 20 years," he said.

The 44-year-old resident of El Dorado Hills, 30 miles east of Sacramento, is an estimator for a construction company. He was en route to Burbank Wednesday when his PSA jet was commandeered near San Francisco and he was held captive until FBI agents stormed the plane and killed the two hijackers.

When that ordeal was over, Lingnau completed his flight to Burbank routinely, handled the work he had traveled south for and was nearly back in Sacramento when a young sky pirate took over the PSA craft and forced it to fly to San Diego and then Oakland before giving up.

"I spent 18 hours on hijacked planes and I can drive to Burbank fast than that," Lingnau declared.

8 Justices Return For Delegate Battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three of four vacationing Supreme Court justices were returning to their offices today, setting the stage for a full-scale consultation on the legal battle over seating key blocs of California and Chicago delegates at the Democratic convention.

With only Justice William J. Brennan absent, eight members of the Court were expected to be available for possibte action.

The decision of a three-member U.S. appeals court on the delegations was appealed Thursday to Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who took the dispute under study.

Four of the associate justices —Potter Stewart, Byron R. White Thurgood Marshall and Harry A. Blackmun —were still in Washington and available for consultation at that time.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., returned from Richmond, Va., early today along with Justice William H. Rehnquist. Justice William O. Douglas, who had gone to his vacation retreat at Goose Prairie, Wash., was en route back to Washington with his arrival expected sometime during the afternoon.

Brennan, vacationing on Nantucket Island, was not expected back at his office.

At issue were the appeals court decisions that would seat 194 disputed delegates in favor

Welfare Director To Head Mormons

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Harold B. Lee, 73, a former city councilman and the first director of the Mormon welfare program in the depression-ridden 30s, today was named 11th president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

The council of the Twelve Apostles placed the mantle of "prophet, seer and revelator" upon Lee to succeed Joseph Fielding Smith, 95, who was buried Thursday.

Youthful Council Shakes Up Commission

By BONNIE BARD

The youthful majority on the Cotati City Council, to the dismay of a predominantly older audience, shook up its planning commission last night by firing one commissioner and forcing another to resign. (Another Cotati City Council story, page 5.)

A third commissioner, Michael Ohannesian who has been ill, was replaced temporarily by appointment of former city councilman Alfred Falletti.

Commissioner R. C. Braden —fired after being told his occupation as a real estate agent influenced his decisions — was replaced by Sharalyn McClendon, 21-year-old employee of a bank in Santa Rosa.

Both appointments were to run till Aug. 4, a date set for reconsideration when the latter appointment drew complaints from the nettled audience that Mayor Annette Lombardi was not allowing enough time for others to apply for the post.

The seat of Commissioner Pablo Ronquillo — whose resignation has been requested by the mayor — was left vacant for the time being, because no agreement had been reached on a successor.

The shakeup of the planning commission was authorized in a 3-2 council vote, a now familiar pattern in which two middle-aged holdover councilmen are a dissenting minority on a council captured by three youthful citizens in last April's municipal election.

The lineup was: Mayor Lombardi and councilmen Geoffrey Dunham and Stephen Laughlin against councilmen Frank P. Dolinsek and Herbert Winter.

The three young councilmen were at odds nearly the entire evening with the standing-room-only audience which occasionally shouted and jeered.

Some accused them of planning to tear apart commissions and boards to suit their young friends and with total disregard of older residents in the community. Mayor Lombardi gaveled the group to silence several times and threatened to eject at least one old man from the room because of continual shouts of "This is a ridiculous meeting."

The older councilmen, Dolinsek and Winter, encouraged the shouts by applauding speakers from the council rostrum.

Young people were outnumbered for the first time since the election of their young friends —perhaps because Sonoma State College is in summer recess —and were quiet amidst the uproar, confident their friends were in the council majority and needed little support.

Miss Lombardi said she had requested the resignations. Ronquillo agreed in writing, but Braden stubbornly refused and forced the council to fire him.

Miss Lombardi refused to discuss the reasons for Ronquillo's firing since he was not present, but it is assumed his many absences from meetings may have been the cause. She said she opposed real estate agents serving on the commission and said Braden's occupation as such sometimes influenced his votes.

Braden, red faced with emotion, stood up among his friends in the audience and said "I have a dedicated interest in planning and development. I have served the city well. You don't represent the city."

Planning commission chairman Allan C. Stansbury came to Braden's defense, saying he represented a large segment of the community and "I couldn't do without his guidance."

Dolinsek and Winter called Miss Lombardi's actions "arbitrary" and strenuously objected. "What are you going to do?

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

'Shane' Star Killed

DENVER (UPI) — Actor Brandon de Wilde, who gained his greatest fame when he played the role of a young boy in the 1953 western film classic "Shane," was killed in a car accident yesterday.

DeWilde

DeWilde, 30, was driving a camper van in suburban Lakewood during a light rain when the vehicle hit a construction truck used to install guard rails.

Lakewood patrolman Robert Ellis said the rain made it impossible to determine whether de Wilde skidded prior to impact.

He was rushed to nearby St. Anthony's Hospital where he died four hours after the accident of a broken neck, back and leg.

Other pictures he was in included "Blue Denim," "All Fall Down," "Hud," "Those Calloways," "In Harm's Way" and "The Deserter."

Another 'Truce' Death

BELFAST (UPI) — Snipers killed one man and wounded another in Belfast today and in Londonderry, Roman Catholic militants said they were holding two British army officers who tried to infiltrate a Catholic area.

Authorities said Samuel Robinson, 19, a Protestant, was fatally wounded by sniper fire in Belfast's Falls Road area. His death brought to 12 the number of persons killed since the truce started.

The provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) also said it was holding two British army officers who tried to infiltrate the Roman Catholic Creggan area of Londonderry.

An IRA spokesman said the men, who were not identified, were wearing plain clothes and were off duty when they tried to enter the Creggan "no-go" closed area.

Landslide Dig Out

TOKYO (UPI) — Rescue workers dug through tons of mud and rubble in west and southwestern Japan today searching for scores of missing persons believed buried in landslides touched off by torrential rains.

Surveys early today listed 74 killed, 113 injured and 114 missing. Landslides also caused extensive damage to homes, highways and railways.

Rain which had hampered rescue operations yesterday in most of the affected areas stopped early today.

By the time heavy downpours began to slacken last night, police had reported 725 landslides, leaving 5,221 persons homeless on Shikoku and Kyushu islands in west central and southwestern Japan.

Connally Optimistic

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — John B. Connally, President Nixon's special envoy, said today he was "very, very hopeful" about the future of the Indian-Pakistani-Bangladesh subcontinent.

Connally left today for Kabul, Afghanistan on his round-the-world trip during which he has visited, among other countries, Bangladesh, India and Pakistan.

The highlight of Connally's two-day visit to Pakistan was a 90-minute meeting with President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. He also conferred with M. A. Rahim, minister of production, presidential affairs and commerce, and Finance Minister Mubashir Hasan.

Shelling In Lebanon

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

An English language newspaper in Beirut said today Israeli gunners shelled southern Lebanon yesterday and warplanes swooped at roof-top level over the area.

In Cairo, the semiofficial newspaper Al Ahram said the United States will begin delivery of a new batch of modified A4 Skyhawk jet warplanes to Israel in November.

Beirut's Daily Star newspaper, quoting sources in Southern Lebanon, said the hour-long Israeli artillery bombardment centered on the village of Kafr Chouba near the joint Israeli-Lebanese border but there were no casualties. There were no Israeli or official Lebanese confirmation of the reports.

Eucharist To Protestants

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican announced today it will allow Protestants and Orthodox to receive communion in Roman Catholic churches, but only if they fully accept Catholic belief concerning the eucharist.

Today's instruction does not allow Catholics to take communion in non-Roman churches. Vatican spokesman Rev. Francesco Fortino said this aspect was not even considered.

The eucharist is the sacrament by which Catholics believe they receive the body and blood of Jesus in the form of bread and wine. Most Protestants also have a communion service, but not all of them share the Catholic belief that Jesus is actually present in the bread and wine.

Chess Game On Tuesday

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — After two weeks of behind-the-scene diplomacy and much talking, Bobby Fischer and Boris Spassky have agreed to get down to their real business — playing chess.

The match for the world title now held by the 35-year-old Russian will begin Tuesday in the Icelandic capital. The winner gets $150,000 and the loser $100,000.

Spassky, a handsome Leningrad journalist who makes a living playing chess the year around, will make the first move. He won the draw last night and will play white, meaning he will make the first move. The 29-year-old American will play black in the first game. In succeeding games they will alternate.

Tanaka Complets Cabinet

TOKYO (UPI) — Japanese Premier Kakuei Tanaka completed his new government today and appointed to the cabinet two party leaders who ran against him for the premiership. The man he defeated in the election refused to join the new cabinet.

Tanaka, 54, officially took office yesterday after certifcation by the Diet (parliament).

Tanaka appointed Masayoshi Ohira as foreign minister to deal with such key international issues as maintenance of friendly relations with the United States and improvement of relations with China.

Takeo Miki was appointed cabinet minister without portfolio.

New German Minister

BONN (UPI) — West German Chancellor Willy Brandt today named Defense Minister Helmut Schmidt head of the Ministry of Economics and Finance.

Schmidt, 53, succeeds his former university teacher, Karl Schiller, who resigned in a dispute over tax reform, budgetary, economic and monetary policies.

ENDICOTT PEABODY

Peabody Tosses In Hat, Crosses Off Wallace

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Endicott Peabody Thursday crossed Gov. George C. Wallace off the list of potential presidential candidates with whom he would be willing to run for vice president.

That means the former Massachusetts governor will be happy to share the Democratic ticket this year with the likes of Sens. George S. McGovern, Hubert H. Humphrey or Edmund S. Muskie. None have asked him to run with them, and Peabody says he fervently hopes they don't.

Peabody is running for the vice presidential nomination this year, and insists he wants to be elected by the delegates to the Democratic National Convention, not selected by the party's presidential candidate.

This is regarded as an eccentric idea in some circles, but Peabody, who arrived in Miami Beach Thursday to take personal charge of his vice presidential campaign, is not the only Democrat to hold it.

Just before Peabody showed up for a news conference with about half a dozen reporters and somewhat larger number of his supporters, Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, the man who undertook last year to read the Pentagon Papers aloud in public, also announced he was running for vice president.

Peabody, who had been alone in the field of announced candidates for nearly eight months, warmly welcomed Gravel. In fact, Peabody said, it is about time everyone who wants to be vice president comes out of the tall grass and makes a run for it.

Peabody's invitation to the other vice presidential hopefuls did not immediately attract any new candidates. But there was a substitution on the growing list of people who McGovern is or is said to be considering for No. 2 if he gets to be No. 1.

Declared out of the game was Terry Sanford, the former governor of North Carolina. A McGovern aide said Sanford had been a possible running-mate, but that he made himself personna non grata when he lauded what the South Dakotan's supporters regarded as a "steal" of his California delegates.

The news that he was crossed off didn't faze Sanford, who says he isn't running for vice president. His eye, he insists, remains firmly fixed on the presidency.

But the McGovern list was kept from shrinking by the sudden appearance of Gov. Patrick Lucey of Wisconsin, who announced the senator was thinking about him, too. "If the offer was made, I can't conceive of circumstances under which I would refuse," he told reporters.

Paratroopers Push Near Quang Tri's City Center

SAIGON (UPI)—A 500-man South Vietnamese paratroop battalion pushed into the center of Quang Tri City today and occupied two-thirds of the town, military spokesmen said.

It was the first sizeable government force to enter the city since the Communists overran it May 1. A spokesman said the battalion had reached the edge of the walled citadel, a 19th Century fortress in the city center.

UPI cameraman Tran Dai Minh reported the troops of the 7th Airborne Battalion brought tanks in with them and encountered little resistance in their house-to-house, urban guerrilla-style advance.

Heavy fighting was reported on the outskirts of the city, however. The paratroopers reported knocking out four Communist tanks in one battle and said overall casualties in three skirmishes were 33 North Vietnamese killed with government losses placed at five dead and 33 wounded.

The paratroopers seized two strategic areas near the city Thursday, then waited for 13,000 troop suppport reinforcements. But Communist forces using captured American-built tanks took the punch out of the reinforcement drive.

A military spokesman in Saigon said another airborne battalion, the 11th, was advancing into the city from the southern suburbs and the 8th South Vietnamese Marine Battalion was pushing in a mile east of the citadel, where North Vietnamese snipers in sizeable numbers are believed dug in.

A 30-man South Vietnamese reconnaissance company moved into the center of Quang Tri City by helicopter two days ago and scouted the citadel, but military spokesmen said today's drive was the first in force since the Communists captured the city and the rest of Quang Tri Province a month after the offensive began in the South March 30.

Officers directing the drive on Quang Tri City 432 miles north of Saigon in the country's northernmost province, have said they will not consider the city recaptured until the citadel is taken.

Hue was shelled today for the sixth consecutive day. Communist gunners began shelling the city Sunday for the first time since the offensive began in an apparent attempt to slow down the drive into Quang Tri.

President Nguyen Van Thieu flew in by helicopter today to the besieged province capital of An Loc, 6 miles north of Saigon. He ignored sporadic Communist shelling and a rainstorm to do so.

The National Forest System, administered by the Department of Agriculture, has 186,899,000 acres in 44 states, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

NAACP Burns Nixon On Job Equalities

DETROIT (UPI)—Two Nixon aides and black Michigan Republicans tried Thursday to quell the criticism of President Nixon's handling of black people's problems, which has dominated the 63rd annual NAACP convention.

But Herbert Hill, national NAACP labor director, replied by accusing the government of spending "billions of dollars in federal funds to directly subsidize racial discrimination in employment."

A major question still hanging as the convention of the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization went into its final day today was whether a proposed resolution calling for President Nixon's defeat in the November election would be voted on by the 2,300 delegates.

Convention leaders had met Wednesday behind closed doors to discuss it.

Although the vast majority of blacks vote for Democrats, the NAACP only once in its history has taken sides in a presidential election. That was in 1964 when it opposed Republican Barry Goldwater.

Hill said the rate of black unemployment in urban areas is between 20 and 36 per cent and more than 50 per cent among "black ghetto youth."

"This state of affairs is the result of the administration's economic policies, the failure to enforce the legal prohibitions against job discrimination and the expenditure of billions of dollars in federal funds to directly subsidize racial discrimination in employment," Hill said.

Earlier in the day, Samuel Johnson, assistant secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HSD), and Samuel Simmons, an official of the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) denied charges that the Nixon administration inefficiently managed housing for poor persons.

RELIGIOUS MEANING

Ma Bell Resists Very Long Surname

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI)—Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania is resisting a request to list three members of the Klinghoffermandellfieldson family in the Philadelphia directory, claiming that Klinghoffermandeilfieldson isn't their real name at all.

But Sarah T. Shore, Raymond C. Weiler and Richard C. Vokes have asked the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission (PUC) to order Bell to list the names they use as members of some nameless religious "congregation."

Miss Shore wants to be listed as Mrs. Zephaniahaza Klinghoffermandellfieldson III. Weiler wants to be listed as Mrs. Sebastian Zephaniahaza Klinghoffermandellfieldson Jr. Vokes wants to appear as Mrs. Obbaddiahabbakuk Zephaniahaza Klinghoffermandelfieldson III.

The PUC complaint was signed by Miss Shore and Harry Weiler, 61, who said he was her father. Both insisted they were not joking.

"These names have a religious significance," said Weiler, "and we are charging Bell with religious discrimination by refusing to print the names as we use them in the congregation."

Weiler said he did not join in the complaint because his telephone is listed in his daughter's name. He said each of the three wanted to be listed as "Mrs." because all of the congregation's religious names are "based on the Mother Earth bit."

Weiler said his daughter owns 11 shares of stock in American Telephone & Telegraph Co.—in fact, she received a $7.15 dividend check last week—and was standing firm on her religious principles. He said the stock was listed in the name of Klinghoffermandellfieldson.

"I get my mail addressed to me by that name," said Miss Shore, "so why not telephone calls?"

She said she was told by the telephone company that it would list the names when it is proven that they are "real or legal."

"I thought these kinds of things were supposed to have ended back in the days when they stopped throwing Christians to the lions," said Weiler.

UAW, Ford In Strike Talks

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Negotiators for the United Auto Workers and Ford Motor Co. met Thursday in an effort to end a strike which began June 14 at a Milpitas plant.

The UAW called the strike during bargaining on health and safety provisions of a contract with a year to run.

The Milpitas plant is the only Ford facility in the West producing the compact Pinto autos. It also manufactures trucks.

WORD-A-DAY

Two Injured By Rampaging Cow

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (UPI) — A rampaging cow injured two persons Thursday after it stormed from the Chambersburg stockyards.

The $400 Holstein broke loose as its owner, Joseph Long of Greencastle, was trying to sell it. The cow then barrelled down four miles of borough streets with Officer Lowell Kiser in pursuit.

Kiser said he missed with three pistol shots when the cow raced into a vacant lot, but finally killed it with a rifle he obtained from his home nearby.

E. Donn Cornell, 73, suffered a concussion and Edgar T. Feight, 65, received minor injuries when mauled by the cow in the downtown square. Borough Health Officer George Rotz tore his trousers when slammed into a wall by the animal, but he was not harmed.

Plan To Clean Ocean Waters Approved

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A sweeping $1.1 billion plan to clean up ocean waters along the California coastline by slapping tight restrictions on waste discharge was approved Thursday by the state Water Resources Board.

The regulations, described by the board's executive officer, Bill B. Dendy, as the toughest in the nation, still require approval by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

In effect, the plan calls for secondary treatment of all sewage dumped into the ocean, prohibiting the release of sludge. It also provides a 1,000 foot protection zone for swimmers and puts stringent standards on the discharge of harmful substances.

The price tag of an estimated $1.1 billion would be for construction and improvement of municipal and industrial sewage systems by 1980. A large chunk of that would be provided by the federal government, with two out of three Californians paying about $9 more a year in taxes.

Industries would pay their own way. Dendy said when the plan is fully implemented—probably in 1977—the ocean would be "less toxic than drinking water."

The far-reaching proposal was adopted on a 4-1 vote, with E.F. Dibble of Redlands the only dissenter. He claimed the measure was too stringent and fought unsuccessfully to soften the restrictions.

The water board has been preparing the new plan for a year and has held three public hearings. Testimony at the hearings resulted in the proposed restrictions, Dendy said.

New Head Not Dream Anymore

FIUGGI, Italy (UPI) — Want a new head? Prof. R.J. White of Cleveland says that was not an impossible question.

"Although all the problems are not resolved, today we must, we want, to think of a head transplant," he told the International Transplant Society's fifth convention Thursday.

"The transplant of a brain which until yesterday was the ultimate frontier of experimental surgery today has been crossed," he told the international gathering.

"We've done it with baboons and we are on the right track," he said. "And this is the track we will go on."

Singer Protests Killing Of Animals

NEW YORK (UPI)—Buxom blonde singer Lynn Carey spent Thursday in a cage at Central Park Zoo. She said it was a "personal protest against the senseless slaughter of wild animals."

Miss Carey, daughter of actor MacDonald Carey, is the lead singer with a group called "Mama Lion." The group gave City Parks Administrator August Heckscher a $1,000 check for renovation of the zoo before she entered the empty yak cage.

2,500 Riot Troops Due At Convention

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 2,500 Army and Marine riot control troops will be airlifted to the Miami Beach area this weekend for standby duty during the Democratic National Convention, the Pentagon announced Friday.

Defense Department spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said the airlift will begin Saturday. The troops will be flown to Homestead Air Force Base, about 25 miles south of the convention site, and will remain there in a tent city unless called in for an emergency.

Friedheim told newsmen at a Pentagon briefing that the cost of providing troops for the Democratic convention next week and the Republican convention in August would be "several millions of dollars". Most of this will be reimbursed to the Pentagon by other government agencies, he said.

"We will be repositioning some forces over the weekend," Friedheim said. "It looks now like it will be in the neighborhood of 2,500 personnel —about 2,000 from the Army's 82nd Airborne Division and about 500 Marines from Camp Lejeune.

"We hope very much they will be able to remain at Homestead and will not be needed during the conventions."

Both Camp Lejeune and the Army's Ft. Bragg, where the 82nd Division is based, are in North Carolina. Troops at these bases have been specially trained in riot control methods and serve as the government's East Coast civil disturbance specialists.

Friedheim said the troops in Miami will be under the command of Lt. Gen. John H. Hay Jr., commander of the 18th Airborne Corps at Ft. Bragg, who in the past has commanded civil disturbance troops used during demonstrations in Washington.

Defense Department sources said Hay would be able to call on at least 2,500 more troops, kept in reserve at Ft. Bragg, should the need arise.

The Nixon administration plans to avoid the use of federal troops if at all possible during the GOP convention.

During the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago, 6,000 federal troops were on hand in a standby role but were never used despite the trouble that erupted there.

ton May 15 and flew first to the Alabama state capital, Montgomery, before continuing on to Miami Beach.

He made clear in a speech at the airport in Montgomery that he intended to continue his presidential effort, saying he had been only "temporarily sidelined from the fight." At the convention, he said he would insist that the party adopt a platform "responsive to the needs and responsive to the desires" of the average working man.

His objective in running for President, Wallace told cheering Alabamans, is to see that "the government of America in the future is going to be responsive to the average citizen."

On the Chicago delegate issue Singer told UPI that "our position is we would be willing to caucus to consider and discuss any reasonable proposal made."

He said the insurgents were not suggesting any specific compromise. "We are simply saying that if the situation changed and the mayor or anybody from his office wanted to enter into discussions, we would be glad to do it."

Daley took to the Supreme Court an appeal of a decision by the Democratic Credentials Committee which ousted his delegation in favor of the insurgents.

With three days to go before the convention opens Monday, the arrival of the three major contenders, plus several lesser ones, was certain to set off a flurry of activity in the convention city.

McGovern, claiming enough votes to win the nomination on the first ballot, was scheduled to arrive Saturday, along with many of the state delegations to the convention.

But a major decision, key to the aspirations of all the candidates, still was awaiting action by the Supreme Court in Washington.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger was expected to decide today whether to convene the Supreme Court in emergency session to decide whether McGovern can retain all271 delegate votes he won in the California primary or forfeit 153 of them to other candidates, including 106 to his chief rival, Humphrey.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday that McGovern be given all the California delegates.

On the basis of that decision, the McGovern camp claimed that the 49-year-old South Dakota senator had clinched a first-ballot nomination with 1,541.5 votes, 32.5 more than the 1,509 needed.

But Jack L. Chestnut, Humphrey's campaign manager, disputed the claim and said that McGovern had peaked, his strength was eroding and that he would fall about 60 votes short.

The latest United Press International tabulation showed McGovern with 1,395.45 firm votes and 55 leaning. Humphrey has 403.55, with 67 leaning; Wallace 364 and 6 leaning, and Muskie 193.6 and 8 leaning. There are 370.4 uncommitted delegate votes.

Democratic officials Thursday turned down a demand by poor people that 750 of their representatives be allowed to lobby for their welfare cause among the delegates on the convention floor.

The request for floor passes was refused by Richard Murphy, the convention director. One of the leaders of the poor people threatened to use "any means necessary" to mingle with the delegates to urge an increase in welfare benefits and reform of the welfare system.

Murphy said there was no room for anyone else on the floor. He said he had offered the spokesmen 50 to 75 gallery passes for each evening session of the convention, which opens here Monday. A spokesman for the poor people said the Democratic officials must act by noon today, and pledged to press his fight "to the very bitter end."

An indication that Muskie's backers might be getting restless came from Maine Gov. Kenneth Curtis, an early Muskie supporter, who said Thursday that only McGovern's nomination could assure the party unity needed to defeat President Nixon in November.

COURT

of the convention front-runner, Sen. George S. McGovern. The South Dakotan's strategists claimed that if the rulings are allowed to stand he would be assured of a first ballot victory.

McGovern's chief rival for the nomination, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, said in an interview with the Washington Post published today that it "would be almost impossible to stop" McGovern if the Supreme Court allows the lower court orders to stand.

But Humphrey also said he would put the issue of disputed California delegates before the full convention opening Monday in Miami Beach no matter what the Supreme Court decides. He promised he would take the convention's decision with good grace if it went against him.

Humphrey raised the possibility he might withdrawfrom the race if he is defeated in the battle over delegates.

"My present plan is to have my name placed in nomination, but I want to keep my options open," he told Post political reporter Lou Cannon in an interview at his Waverly, Minn., home.

The Supreme Court received appeals Thursday from the Democratic National Committee and from attorneys for a slate of delegates allied to Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley. The appeals asked the high court to reverse decisions made Wednesday by the U.S. Court of Appeals from the District of Columbia.

The appeals court ruled that the Credentials Committee acted correctly in unseating the 59-member Chicago area bloc allied to Daley. The committee decided the method used to choose the Chicago delegates did not meet new party rules giving equal representation to women, minorities and youth.

McGovern stood to gain 41 delegates from the Chicago area if Daley's suit fails, along with the 153 in the California slate for a total of 194.

Attorneys for the national committee have argued the disputes should not be settled in court but should be resolved on the convention floor.

Fire me next?" Winter asked. When Miss Lombardi replied she didn't have the power to fire councilmen, Winter sarcastically replied, "I'm sure glad of that."

Miss Lombardi — with Dunham and Laughlin concurring — appointed Miss McClendon to replace Braden, but made the appointment only until Aug. 4 after the older residents complained that nothing was known about the appointee and others hadn't been given a chance to apply.

The council then appointed Falletti to serve on the commission until Aug. 4 in the place of Ohannesian, who has been ill, but may be again available by then.

Joseph Dorfman, a former planning commissioner, boisterously called the firings and appointments "disgusting" and accused the council of "playing with the planning commission like a ball."

Later in the meeting Dolinsek complained that neither he nor Winter are ever consulted about council business. "You don't tell us two about anything," Dolinsek said bitterly.

Miss Lombardi said she had tried to contact both councilmen several times without success. She said she would be happy to consider their friends for appointments as well as younger members of the community.

Labor Hits San Rafael Park Stand

The Marin County Labor Council has endorsed formation of a countywide parks and recreation district, and accused the San Rafael City Council of trying to "torpedo" the proposal, which will be on the November general election ballot.

Charles B. Weers, labor council secretary-treasurer, wrote the Marin Local Agency Formation Commission yesterday, urging San Rafael's inclusion in the proposed district, whether or not the city wants in.

He said the labor council voted unanimously Wednesday in favor of the countywide plan and "vigorously opposes" exclusion of San Rafael.

Weers said San Rafael city councilmen were "perfectly aware" that getting two-thirds voter approval of a $2 million bond issue for San Rafael open space faced "a near zero possibility" and said San Rafael's plans for a special bond election in September was "flagrant disregard for the use of the taxpayers' money."

The local agency formation commission will hear the proposal to create the countywide district on Wednesday.

Bike Gang Named In Girls' Assault

OAKLAND (AP) — A total of 196 felony counts have been filed against 13 motorcycle gang members accused of holding two 17-year-old Canadian girl tourists in an East Oakland house for four hours and raping them.

The 13 appeared yesterday before Oakland Municipal Judge Jacqueline Tabor who set bail at $100,000 for each and denied a motion to reduce the amount. Each was charged with nine counts of forcible rape, one count of sodomy and five counts of oral copulation. Duane H. Lahey, 31, of Ogden, Utah, was charged additionally with possessing an illegal weapon, a blackjack.

The Canadian girls, both students from Vancouver, B. C. were on their way home from a California vacation when they were taken captive Monday night. They told police that while they were stopped at a stop sign off the freeway, one of the motorcyclists got into their car and forced them to drive to the house where they were stripped and abused. They escaped and fled to a nearby motel.

Tests Under Way On Best Road Trees

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—The State Highway Department and horticulturists at Michigan State University have begun a project to find out which tree species thrive best along urban highways.

The aim of the project is to determine which trees can survive the onslaught of auto fumes, industrial and household pollutants and mist from salt used in winter highway maintenance. More than 1,000 trees of 28 species have been planted in three freeway interchanges for the test.

One Caravan That No One Will Top

CHICAGO (UPI)—Each election year brings out the campaign caravan but no candidate will top the spectacular productions of the original caravan people.

Some of the caravans that carried freight and passengers through Asian and African deserts included more than 10,000 camels, says Encyclopaedia Zritannica, One caravan, in 1908, moved out with 20,000 camels.

Hearing On Tiscornia Strip Rezone

A public hearing on a proposal to rezone a 2,000-foot strip of land along Magnolia Avenue from its present R-3 to S-study district will be held by Larkspur Planning Commission at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday at city hall.

According to John Appleton, planning director, the city's staff will recommend the rezoning to commissioners. The curving strip, one lot deep, is a section of the Tiscornia estate. Its existing zoning would allow 600 dwelling units in its 30-plus acres, said Appleton, and city staff recommended putting it into a study zone which would require a conditional use permit for any development.

He said about 30 property owners involved in the proposed rezoning, in addition to the Tiscornia estate, have been notified of the public hearing.

Other items on the agenda include discussion of the proposed amendment to the city's sign ordinance, which would drastically reduce maximum permitted sign areas.

Fire Damages Valley Home

A pre-dawn fire today in Homestead Valley heavily damaged a house at 479 Panoramic Highway, according to Marin County Asst. Fire Chief H. Stanley Rowan.

Three units from the Marin County Fire Department were called to the blaze at 2:25 a.m.

The fire was caused by a faulty floor heater, and burned the living room, dining room and kitchen. Total damage to the house and contents was estimated at $10,000.

Richard D. Anderson, the tenant, was away when the fire started. The house was occupied by a visitor, Richard Birkett.

Mathilde Walburn of Mill Valley owns the house.

Driest San Joaquin Season In 38 Years

FRESNO (AP) — Rainfall totals three to five inches below normal during the past year have made 1971-72 the driest season in 38 years in the central San Joquin Valley and increased fire danger in Sierra forests to late summer levels.

Only 5.34 inches of rain fell in Fresno between July 1, 1971 and last June 30, the National Weather Service said Thursday, making it the driest year since the 1933-34 season when 4.43 inches fell. Normal for the year is 11.14 inches.

State Senator Is Not Swayed By Recall Move

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A recall drive launched by three women against her husband will fail to change his opposition to an Equal Rights law, says the wife of Sen. James Mills.

"If a guy is wrong, you obviously don't put on so much pressure that his status and pride are involved," Joanne Mills said.

Mills, president pro tem of the California Senate, said his opposition to the proposed U.S. constitutional amendment won't be swayed.

The recall move was begun Wednesday by three women in Mills' 40th senatorial district.

Man Found Dead At Civic Center

An unidentified man in his early 20s was found dead in his car in the employees' parking lot of the civic center today. The auto's engine still was running and a hose was feeding fumes into the car.

Bill J. Thomas, coroner's deputy, said the car, a 1964 white and blue Oldsmobile, was registered to a San Rafael man but refused to release the name until the victim is positively identified.

The victim, described as five feet 10 inches tall, 175 pounds with brown hair and hazel eyes, was found at 6:38 a.m. He had been dead four to six hours, Thomas said.

The dead man was inside a sleeping bag in the car and was dressed in a white suit, jeans and brown canvas shoes. No identification and no note was found, Thomas said.

Convention HQ Breakin Probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Committee to Re-elect President Nixon is conducting its own investigation of the alleged breakin and bugging of the Democratic National Committee headquarters, its spokesman said Friday.

DeVan Shumway said that the inquiry had been going on for some time and indicated that a report may be forthcoming in the near future

Five men were arrested at the Democratic headquarters in the plush Watergate Apartments on June 17. They included James W. McCord, who was dismissed from his post as security chief for the committee two days later.

McCord was bound over to a fedeal grand jury Thursday. The other four men waived preliminary hearings.

JURY

a consolidated, countywide police department divorced from the divergent communities that make up Marin County is a big brother concept that is antithetical to the enlightened concepts of police-community relations and community control of institutions."

While consolidation is being considered the jury also wants a study of the sheriff's office. Although claiming it was generally impressed by the quality of service supplied by the sheriff's department, the jury nevertheless suggested an investigation because "there appears to be an on-going problem concerning assignments and working conditions."

The jury also noted public dissatisfaction with high cost and complaints about lack of service in some parts of the county.

It therefore suggested that the state's Peace Officers Standards and Training Commission be called in to make a study.

Visting the county jail, the justice committee found "depressing and dangerous" overcrowding and recommended an honor farm to cure the ills. Such a minimum security facility has been approved by the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

The jury took the supervisors to task for failing to visit the jail in three years and suggested they begin periodic visits.

The purpose of studying the juvenile court, the jury said, was "to clarify the role of the juvenile court and the juvenile probation system in Marin County and to describe their operation."

It described the two and commended the people involved.

In previously released reports, the jury which left office last week recommended firing the three top officers of the Sausalito Police Department, adding two members to the board of supervisors and approving the preliminary countywide plan as soon as possible to stop ill-advised development.

Bill Clears Assembly On Mine Construction

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly has passed a bill aimed at preventing recurrence of disasters such as the Sylmar Tunnel explosion that killed 17 men last year in the San Fernando Valley.

The proposal by Assemblyman Jim Keysor, D-Granada, was sent to the Senate Thursday on a 64-3 vote. It would establish standards for mine construction and require inspections twice annually of underground mines.

Restrictions On Use Of Forests

PORTERVILLE (UPI)—Sequoia National Forest supervisor Jim James today announced restrictive new fire and use and travel conditions on forest lands and warned that more man-caused brushfires could force total closure of the forest.

James said 109 fires have occurred on forest lands this year including three recent man-caused blazes which cost nearly $1 million to suppress.

He said weather forecasts continue to call for hot and dry weather and the possibility is great for more forest and brush fires.

The new regulations, effective at midnight, prohibit all off road vehicle travel on forest lands except that allowed by current contract or permit.

Belvedere Hikes Pay; No Budget

The Belvedere City Council officially approved 5 per cent pay increases for municipal employees last night, but delayed adoption of a $408,856 operating budget for the new fiscal year.

Councilman Allen Steinau dissented on the wage vote, saying he approved of sliding boosts similar to a package offered earlier by City Mgr. William L. Cavalli.

The 5 per cent hike, which will bring the city payroll to $208,906 this fiscal year, was tentatively approved at the council session Monday night.

Adoption of the operating budget, about $50,000 higher than last fiscal year, was deferred until next month, when the city tax rate also will be set.

Cavalli told the council the present total rate of $1.80 per $100 assessed valuation would remain the same if the operating budget is adopted as is and if the council also approves a recommended capital outlay program of $91,540.

That budget was given to the council for the first time last night and held for further study. It includes $35,000 in state gas tax funds for street construction on Bella Vista Avenue; $20,500 for new fire mains, an account supported by a special tax of 10 cents per $100, and $3,600 for a new police car.

Mayor Thomas S. Price wondered whether the fire main work could be deferred, depending upon the Marin Municipal Water District's own work timetable in the community. But Cavalli noted it would mean supporting the long-range project at an even higher level next year.

The issue is to be reviewed further.

The Belvedere City Council Also:

PARKS — Affirmed its support of creation of a regional park and open space district in Marin, saying the agency should be governed by a board other than county supervisors. The freshened stance was in response to an attack on the proposed district by County Administrator John F. Barrows. While councilmen expressed doubt that Belvedere would benefit from the district, they felt compelled to express an opinion on its administration.

BROEMMEL — Heard County Assessor Bert W. Broemmel explain property assessment procedures in response to a council invitation. Assessed value is up substantially in the community.

FIRE — Learned from insurance officials that the city will retain its Class 6 fire rating.

CELEBRATION — Was told by Steinau of plans for the community's diamond jubilee celebration July 29. A picnic, athletic events and yacht races will be held.

PLANNING — Pending further consideration of the city's continued problem of whether to allow home development on substandard lots contiguous to home sites, postponed action on use permits and/or variances for Steve Warren at 306 Belvedere Avenue, Cleon Arnold at 214 Bay View Avenue and Allan Hulme at 20 Madrona Avenue.

PAVEMENT — Said it would try to come up with a better scheme for slowing traffic approaching a curve at San Rafael Avenue and West Shore Road. Rumble pavement — bumps in the road — recently was installed, but councilmen believed the strips are ineffective.

TELEPHONE — In view of possible future consolidation of the Tiburon and Belvedere police departments and what was described as a problem-free arrangement for the fire department, accepted Cavalli's recommendation to defer changing police and fire telephone numbers to simpler digits.

RECREATION — Said it would not help the Reed School District with the cost of building tennis courts at Del Mar School and expressed reluctance to contribute funds to the district's summer school recreation program.

RUBBISH — Postponed introduction of an ordinance banning sweeping or washing of rubbish or petroleum products onto streets and sidewalks, Price saying he wanted to study the matter further.

LIGHT — On a trial basis, said it would install a street light on Hilarita Circle. A resident said poor lighting helped cause a burglary at his home, although other residents earlier opposed the light.

VEHICLES — Authorized Cavalli to sell by bid or to junk a 15-year-old city pickup truck and street sweeper.

GARAGE SALES — At Steinau's request, said it would discuss at its next meeting possible controls on garage sales. Steinau said the wares often spilled out into the street.

CABLE — Asked Cavalli to urge work speedup on installation of cable television service to various parts of the community.

CAMPERS — Expressed interest in an ordinance that would control parking of large campers on city streets, and asked staff to review control ordinances in force in other cities.

OPEN SPACE — Heard Price announce appointment of a six-member city open space committee that would identify possible areas of open space acquisition.

MEETING — Said it would next meet at its regularly scheduled session Aug. 7.

State Billed For Davis Trial Cost

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Santa Clara County sent a bill of $485,965 to the California finance director for the first part of the Angela Davis trial.

Phil Batchelor, aide to Santa Clara County Executive Howard W. Campen, said Thursday that the bill, part of a projected $600,000 debt, covers the period between Nov. 22, 1971, and Apr. 9, 1972.

The remaining part of the bill will cover the period up to June 4, when the 28-year-old black militant was acquitted of murder, kidnap and conspiracy charges in connection with the Aug. 7, 1970 gun battle at the Marin County Civic Center in which four persons, including a Superior Court judge, were killed.

Batchelor said the bill was authorized by the new Bagley Act, requiring state reimbursement for prison-related trials. He said the county paid out $166,045 in salaries, overtime and benefits for deputies; $262,378 for remodeling jails and securing the courthouse; $14,429 for Miss Davis' medical services and for trial transcripts, and the $43,113 balance for miscellaneous legal costs.

Old Building To Burn With Smog Board Approval

Pending approval of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, the Air Force will continue to burn building T-93, which has been judged inadequate for use as a private air terminal, according to Col. VermontGarrison, base commander.

The building was scheduled for destruction more than a month ago, but demolition was delayed while it was evaluated by Marin County for potential use as an air carrier terminal, Garrison said.

Two interested air carriers, Air California and Hughes Air West, and the county have determined that the building wouldn't be useful as a terminal.

Community fire departments and the base fire department will burn the remainder of the building in firefighting exercises.

Increased Cotati Budget Plan To Council; Some Change Due

A preliminary 1972-73 budget of $439,136 was presented last night to the Cotati City Council. (Another Cotati City Council story, page 1.)

City Mgr. Paul W. Salfen described the budget as "very rough" and said he would have some changes and a detailed analysis ready next week.

The new budget would represent an increase of $43,562 over the 1971-72 budget of $395,574.

Salfen said the tax rate of $1.25 per $100 assessed valuation probably would stay the same although assessed valuation figures have not been received.

The budget by department (with last year's figures in parenthesis) includes: city council, $2,600 ($2,000); city manager-clerk, $25,779 ($21,812); treasurer, $3,418 ($3,242); attorney, $9,250 ($5,000); planning, $1,600 ($4,600); governmental buildings, $7,000($12,250); non-departmental, $60,100 ($53,764); police, $67,691 ($57,199); building inspection, $10,113 ($7,219); engineering, $4,500 ($3,400); streets, $45,236 ($56,613);water, $143,504 ($45,076); sanitation, $28,962 ($23,079); park and recreation, $18,183 ($14,320); gas tax street improvements, $11,200 ($86,000).

The council will schedule a study session on the budget next week.

The Cotati City Council also:

COMMISSION — By 3-2 vote, introduced an ordinance reestablishing a park and recreation commission. Councilmen Frank P. Dolinsek and Herbert T. Winter dissented, saying the commission was disbanded three years ago and is still not needed.

WELL — Heard city engineer Paul Schoch report that drilling a new well may be cheaper and more practical then renovating the old water well as had been planned. The council asked that cost comparisons be prepared for the July 20 meeting.

TRAFFIC — Heard Mayor Annette Lombardi report that problems had not yet been worked out for the plan to reroute traffic around Plaza Park and that a special meeting may be called later this month.

BOYCOTT — Voted to support the lettuce boycott led by the United Farmworkers Union. Dolinsek and Winter dissented, saying the problem doesn't relate to Cotati.

PERSONNEL — Met behind closed doors for nearly two hours reviewing a personnel problem but refused to discuss details.

COLLEGE — Approved a resolution urging the state college board of trustees to lower the ultimate enrollment at Sonoma State College from 12,000 to 7,000 students.

TREE — Voted to plant a tree in Plaza Park in memory of Marguerite Hahn, the Santa Rosa Press-Democrat correspondent who died Monday.

COFFEE — Agreed to hold its first coffee klatch on July 17 at 8 p.m. at city hall to promote communication with citizens.

VISITING U.S., MARIN

Foreign Students' Lament: 'We'll Cut Our Hair When We Go Home'

By MARLENE FREEDMAN

Two long-haired foreign exchange students traded bittersweet observations yesterday about America's youth, the group they had joined for the past year.

The students — Mario C. Montero of Argentina and Ryoichi Azuma of Japan —were among 44 American Field Service exchange students visiting Marin County for three days of sightseeing.

The group, representing 25 countries, was hosted by Marin families on the farewell leg of their American visit.

They had attended high schools in the San Diego area for the past year under AFS scholarships and were about to return to their native countries.

Montero and Azuma (the latter promptly tells everyone they can call him "Roy") stayed at the home of Frank Bosl, San Rafael High School student, who won an AFS scholarship to spend the summer in Argentina but had to cancel due to illness.

Roy has long hair. Mario has even longer hair, held in place by a colorful headband, and sports a mustache.

"We're both going to have to cut our hair when we get home," said Montero in his thick, sometimes undecipherable accent.

One of their initial impressions of high school in America, they recalled, was being able to wear casual clothing, long hair and mustaches and beards.

"Students are less disciplined here," commented Azuma, still astonished over his teacher allowing a girl to knit during music class.

"But there is more communication here between teachers and students," he added. "At home, we get only study from teachers. But here, some of my teachers were like friends, like real friends."

It was during their year here that both boys saw marijuana smoked for the first time. "I had heard of it," Montero said, "but I never saw it before."

Montero offered a theory about the use of drugs among American youth: "The government doesn't do much for young people. They have a minimum drinking age, most of the nightclubs are not for those under 18, there are very few places for the young to go, so they turn to marijuana and other drugs."

Azuma interjected, "I was walking on the beach at La Jolla at 11:30 one night when the police stopped me. They asked what I was doing.

"They said there was a curfew in California, that kids aren't supposed to be outdoors after 10 at night.

"I tgld them I didn't know. I was just walking on the beach."

After seeing marijuana smoked freely, Roy has come to his own conclusion: "I can't agree that marijuana should be legalized. Compared to alcoholic drinks, marijuana is worse."

The conversation turned to hippies and draft dodgers and revolutionaries.

Mario mused, "The young people don't like what's going on in Vietnam or what the government is doing, but then only 23 per cent of them vote. . .I don't know why they complain."

Sentencing Today In Murder Of Executive

SANTA MONICA (UPI)— Dwight Walter, 18, was to be sentenced today for his part in the killing of Los Angeles business executive Alan Scott MacFarlane, 43, last Feb. 1.

Walter pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in the case earlier.

On Thursday another defendant, Richard Light, 24, who pleaded guilty to first degree murder June 12 for the same killing, was sentenced to life in prison by Superior Court Judge Pearce Young.

MacFarlane, the vice president and controller of Trans America Financial Corp., was found on a Baldwin Hills baseball diamond Feb. 1. He had been beaten to death.

Gallinas Village Community Services District directors postponed last night's scheduled meeting due to lack of a quorum.

Bremer U.S. Trial Delayed; State Trial Due Next Week

BALTIMORE (UPI) —U.S. District Court Judge Edward S. Northrop today indefinitely postponed the federal trial of Arthur H. Bremer, who is charged with the attempted assassination of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

"I am cancelling the July 17 trial date," Northrop said. "We are not playing a tug-of-war with the state on this trial. The state has elected to go ahead with the trial and we will honor that trial date."

Bremer's state trial is scheduled to begin next Wednesday in Upper Marlboro, Md. The federal trial had been scheduled five days later.

Bremer's court-appointed attorney, Benjamin Lipsitz, asked Northrop to delay the federal trial, saying, "I am in a box having to prepare for two trials in the same week."

Northrop responded that "July 17 is now inappropriate under the circumstances because the publicity of the state trial would have an influence on this trial."

"You should be completely free to conduct your case in the state court," Northrop told Lipsitz. "We will reset the federal trial consistent with the calendar of this court."

Earlier Northrop dismissed motions by Lipsitz asking that federal charges be dismissed on grounds of pre-trial publicity and double jeopardy. The judge called the motions "premature at this time".

After looking at a portfolio of newspaper and magazine clippings and broadcast transcripts from the day of the Wallace shooting, submitted by Lipsitz, Northrop turned down a motion to dismiss charges on grounds of pretrial publicity.

Conciliation Service Will Enter Strike

MARTINEZ (UPI) —The Contra Costa County Board of Supervisors has agreed to a union proposal that the state Conciliation Service be used in an effort to end an 11-day clerical workers' walkout.

The board said Thursday, however, that the agreement "does not mean the board is changing its position or making any concessions, for it is convinced about the fundamental soundness of its position."

Los Angeles Columnist And Socialite Is Dead

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Princess Conchita Sepulveda Pignatelli, longtime society columnist and member of one of the city's first families, died Thursday of an apparent heart attack. She was 84.

She was the daughter of Los Angeles' first superior court judge, Ygnacio Sepulveda, and acquired her title through a marriage in the 1930s to a Roman papal prince, Valerio Pignatelli.

For years her colorful column covered the city's brightest social events. "The newspaper years were the best," she said in 1962 after being named Woman of the Year by the Los Angeles Times. "Newspaper life was never a chore. I like people."

A native of Mexico City, she came to Los Angeles as a youth and was considered a belle of the town. Both her father and her mother, Erlinda de la Guerra of Santa Barbara, claimed extensive land holdings in Southern California.

She was a member of El Pueblo de Los Angeles State Historical Monument Commission, and prominent for decades in Los Angeles social, civic and philanthropic circles.

Marinites Face Trial On Hashish

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Four Marin County residents and a man from Baltimore, Md., are to stand trial Sept. 11 in U.S. District Court on a variety of narcotics charges including hashish possession.

Kenneth Michael Stevens, 22; Carl Sheldon Wolfe, 29, both of Mill Valley; Peter B. Erlebron, 29, and Barbara Lynn Coffman, 27, both of Bolinas, and William Paul Wyler, 24, of Baltimore, had a pound of hashish in their possession when arrested Feb. 15, narcotics agents reported.

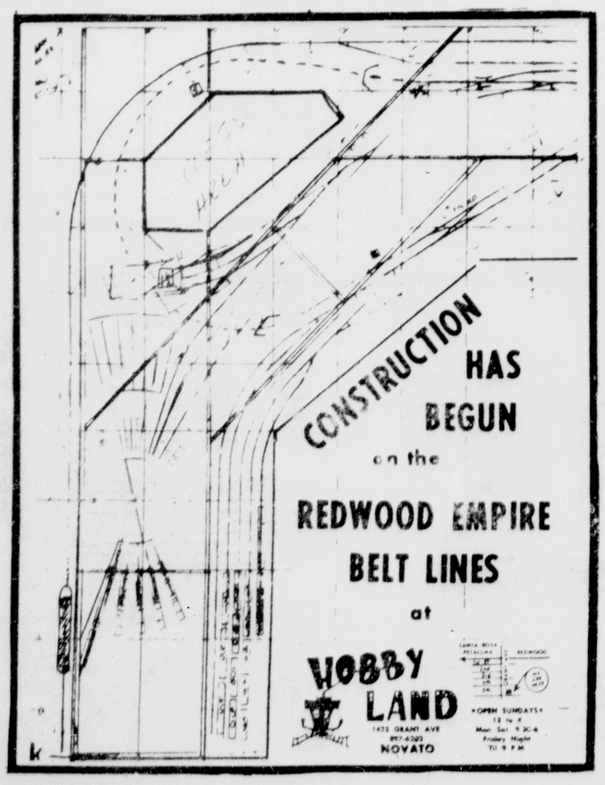
Returning to Bolinas with a search warrant, the agents found another 32 pounds of hashish, they said.

All five were charged with possession of hashish; Wyler and Wolfe additionally were accused of distributing hashish and Coffman of possession of peyote.

All but Wyler have been released on bail; Judge Samuel Conti refused on June 30 to lower his bail and set the trial dates, court aides said.

Annual Meeting

The Shoreline Unified School District board will hold its annual organizational meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday at Tomales High School. Board officers will be elected.



THE GALBRAITHS

Busy Schedule At Convention

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — When the Democratic National Convention convenes next week in Miami Beach, the Galbraith family of Cambridge, Mass., carrying both the old and new looks of the party, will be there to cast its three delegate votes for Sen. George McGovern.

Defeated by younger folks in his bid for a seat on the party's Platform Committee, economist John Kenneth Galbraith will make his presence known by daily debating columnist William Buckley on a national television network.

His sons, Jamie, 20, and Peter, 21, will be among the hundreds of benefactors of party reforms who will be casting their convention delegate ballots before they ever vote in a presidential election.

There is at least one thing, though, that the 63-year-old Galbraith, confidant of President John F. Kennedy and former ambassador to India, has in common with his two sons — support of McGovern.

The elder Galbraith was elected in the Massachusetts primary as an at-large delegate favorable to McGovern, while Jamie was elected from the state's 8th Congressional District. Peter, whose legal home has been the family's Vermont farm for the last two years, was elected as a McGovern-pledged delegate at a Vermont state party convention.

"Conventions are generally very boring," the elder Galbraith, who has attended every Democratic convention since 1940, said in an interview. He says he goes "almost as a force of habit."

In 1960, he was the floor manager for Kennedy's successful bid for the party's nomination. He delivered a seconding speech for Eugene J. McCarthy in Chicago in 1968, a convention he concedes was not boring.

Peter and Jamie, both Harvard seniors, will be participating in their first convention, as are many of the delegates from New England delegations. Jamie attributes his selection to the McGovern slate partly to party reforms which guaranteed more delegate strength for women, blacks and youth.

Peter thinks he would have been selected even without the reforms. He has been town party chairman in Townshend, Vt. for the last two years.

Both feel they won election independently of their father.

Although family political discussions are frequent at the Galbraith home, the decision to support McGovern was not a collective one.

The elder Galbraith made the decision first, and in a strategy session in Newfane, Vt., in the fall of 1969, he urged McGovern to try for the presidency.

Jamie says, "The decision was made as soon as it became clear that Ted Kennedy wasn't running."

Jamie joined in December 1970 and coordinated McGovern's efforts on college campuses. Peter became a McGovern convert in 1971.

Saigon Diplomat Is Not Surprised By New Talk

SAIGON (UPI) — Reports from Communist sources that Russia and China advised Hanoi to settle the Vietnam War through negotiating "confirms what we already knew," a South Vietnamese former diplomat said today.

The diplomat, who maintains close ties with the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu, said despite the urging from Russia and China he did not expect a cease-fire or major break in the deadlocked Paris peace talks until after the U.S. presidential election in November.

UPI diplomatic correspondent K. C. Taler reported fom London Thursday that Communist sources said Russia and China—acting independently—advised North Vietnamese leaders to settle the war without delay.

"We think it confirms what we already knew," the former diplomat said. "There was some kind of pressure from the big brothers to Hanoi."

Warren Mistron, Larkspur's director of public works, was named Larkspur's Citizen of the Year, 1972, for the work he does for the public in his own time.

The recognition by the chamber of commerce noted Mistron's voluntary service to the city during the last 20 years. He's helped most of the organizations in town, including the chamber, the Lions Club and the Larkspur Women's Club.

And this year's Fourth of July parade was the only one he hasn't helped organize — because he was up there on the reviewing stand as guest of honor.

Mistron, who is volunteer assistant fire chief, was named "Fireman of the Year" by the Marin County Association of Fire Departments in 1966.

He helped build the Joe Wagner field for Little League and the Bundy Field for the Babe Ruth League, all on his own time, and each year takes care of the town's Christmas decorations for the chamber.

A native of Berkeley, he has lived in Larkspur for 24 years. He and his wife live at 305 Alexander Avenue, and reared their three children there.

He began working for the city when the entire public works department consisted of him and the chief, some brooms, an old tractor and dump truck and one pickup truck. Without formal engineering training, he worked his way through the department until he became superintendent, being named director of public works last year.

There is now a staff of 10 men, and a fleet of modern rolling equipment.

Mistron, who has in past years been named radio station KABL's Citizen of the Day, and Outstanding Fireman of the Year by the Kiwanis Club of Ross, received a plaque from the Larkspur chamber as a token of the honor.

A Windfall For Convention Center

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The shift of the Republican National Convention from San Diego to Miami Beach is paying off for the Los Angeles Convention Center.

A spokesman for the facility says a Buick sales convention, dropped by Miami Beach to make room for the Republicans, has been shifted to Los Angeles.

This means, he explained, an additional $266,826 for the facility—which means it will only lose about $1.4 million this year.

Sophia Loren To Be Medal Topic

ROME (UPI) — The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) said today it is striking a medal of Italian actress Sophia Loren to be sold to help finance worldwide farm development.

The medal, will come in bronze, silver and gold versions and will depict Miss Loren as Ceres, the Roman goddess of agriculture, holding an ear of wheat. An FAO spokesman said the actress agreed to the use of her features to express her belief in the FAO goal—"Food for All."

Stolen Baby Found In Bus

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—A 2-year-old boy was found safe in an empty bus Thursday, more than 24 hours after being snatched from his mother's arms.

A note pinned to the toddler read: "If James goes to prison, you'll be sorry lady. He better be out by Friday."

The child's mother, Mrs. Ida Martin, is a prosecution witness against James McClain, a burglary suspect. She was scheduled to appear Wednesday, but the trial was delayed.

Police Lt. Bill Fugler found the youngster in the backseat of a bus in a storage yard after the dispatcher received an anonymous phone call.

The baby, Lucious Martin II, was wrenched from his mother as she stood in front of her home watching a fireworks display Tuesday night.

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

Rights Bill Move Appears Dead

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Embattled legislation giving California's ratification to the federal Equal Rights Amendment for Women appeared to be dead in the legislature today.

A surprise move to withdraw the measure from the Senate Rules Committee where it had been bottled up for weeks was overwhelmingly beaten down by the full Senate.

The action represented a vote of confidence for the Senate power structure and a personal victory for Senate leader James R. Mills, D-San Diego, the target of a recall movement because of his opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA).

Women's rights activists have pressed a fierce lobbying and letter-writing campaign during the current election year to force the five-member Rules Committee to release the measure for a floor vote by the full Senate.

Opponents, especially labor unions, have warned that if enacted as part of the U.S. Constitution, the ERA would wipe out hard-won protective work laws for women. Others maintain it would make young women eligible for military draft.

As the Senate was preparing to shut down Thursday night, Sen. Albert S. Rodda, D-Sacramento, suddenly moved that the ratification measure by Assemblyman Walter Karabian, D-Monterey Park, be withdrawn from the Rules Committee which Mills heads.

His voice cracking with emotion, Rodda told the Senate:

"It was wrong for us to put this pressure on the Rules Committee. I want to put the responsibility on the floor of this house. I'm tired of what's going on. Let's take the pressure off Rules."

The move, interpreted as a favor to Mills and the Rules Committee, was turned back on a 4-28 vote. The action seemed certain to finish off the ERA issue for this session.

Mills appealed to his Senate colleagues to "consult your own consciences and do what is right." He identified Karabian as the "chief organizer" of the newly started recall election movement in Mills' San Diego district.

Karabian denied he had any role in the recall effort and said he told Mills earlier in the day he merely wanted to gather enough signatures of senators on a petition to "break loose the ERA from the Rules Committee."

"Sen. Mills is deep in quicksand over this issue because he's in a position of obstructing equal legal rights for half the people of California," Karabian said. "He's lashing out blindly at people."

He said Rodda's action was "totally unauthorized" by him.

Leaders of both parties rallied behind Mills and urged defeat of the highly unusual motion on grounds that the integrity of the legislature's committee system was at stake and that Rules had held three hearings on the issue and acted without "deceit."

NO-FAULT SETBACK

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The legislature's only surviving active major no-fault car insurance bill clung to life today after suffering another severe and possibly fatal setback.

The compromise measure supported by Gov. Ronald Reagan was struck from the business calendar of the Senate Judiciary Committee Thursday as the panel prepared for a showdown vote.

"I don't have the votes," said the measure's lead author, Assemblyman Jack Fenton, D-Montebello.

No date for a new hearing was set as the legislature headed for a July 28 to Nov. 8 recess.

Fenton called the development a victory for the American and California Trial Lawyers Associations which have waged a bitter lobbying campaign against no-fault insurance for motorists.

SINGLES BREAK

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly has sent to the Senate a bill that would give unmarried taxpayers a $168 million income tax break although opponents labeled the measure the "Hippie Tax Relief Act."

The proposal by Assemblyman Robert Cline, R-Canoga Park, was easily approved Thursday on a 58-9 vote.

Cline argued that the present tax rate on single persons is "discriminatory."

Under his proposal, a single person would be allowed to compute his taxes in the way a married person can. The result would be that a single person earning $13,000 a year would have his taxes reduced from $565 to $285.

A married couple with the identical income would pay the same $260 he presently pays.

During debate on the measure, Cline said opponents had labeled the bill the "Hippie Tax Relief Act" in line with their arguments that it would give an unmarried couple living together a better tax break than a married couple.

SAVE-COAST BILL

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A conservationist-supported bill imposing strict controls on development of the 1,100-mile California coastline was swiftly moved through the Assembly Thursday with almost no debate.

The measure by Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills, was sent to the Senate on a 56-13 vote.

However, Sieroty told a newsman after the vote he did not "want the people to be misled that we're going to have legislation this year."

He said he was pinning his hopes for controls on haphazard development of the coastline on voter approval this November of an initiative modeled after his bill as it was originally introduced.

The Senate Natural Resources Committee has already turned down nearly identical coastal protection legislation.

Sieroty said he had little hope of securing the Senate committee's approval of the measure or Gov. Ronald Reagan's signature if the bill passed the legislature.

PAY HIKE LOSES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate has rejected by one vote a move to restore $15.5 million worth of state employee pay increases vetoed from the budget by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Senate Democratic leader George Moscone of San Francisco led the veto override effort Thursday night but failed when the proposal was turned back by a narrow 26-13 vote. It needed at least 27 votes.

The legislature authorized across-the-board state civil service pay raises totaling 7.5 per cent, and threw in a 3.4 per cent increase to correct salary inequities in certain job slots.

Reagan cut the total increase to 5 per cent, the sum he originally asked for.

Six Republicans joined the 20 Democrats in attempting the override. They were Sens. Peter Behr, San Rafael, W. Craig Biddle, Riverside; George Deukmejian, Long Beach; Donald Grunsky, Watsonville; Milton Marks, San Francisco; and John Nejedly, Walnut Creek.

LABOR DISPUTES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Major legislation aimed at providing the machinery for settlement of local government employe labor disputes is now before the Assembly after being overwhelmingly approved by the Senate.

The bill, drafted by a special Senate committee, prohibits strikes by local public employes. Excluded from the bill are employes of school districts.

The proposal was approved Thursday 27-5 in the Senate after brief debate in which Sen. Clark Bradley, R-San Jose, charged it "really isn't going to accomplish anything."

But Sen. Ralph Dills, who carried the bill, said the proposal provided a method for bringing two sides together to resolve their differences. He noted local public agencies were plagued by 30 strikes in 1970.

Harvey is to appear in superior court July 27 for setting a trial date.

He was arrested March 21 in San Francisco, after allegedly selling $250 worth of heroin to a police informant, narcotics agents said. Agents said they found both methamphetamine and cocaine in Harvey's possession when he was arrested. He was charged with possession and sale of narcotics.

Petaluma Council Adopts Budget

The Petaluma City Council adopted its 1972-73 budget yesterday but heard that 5 per cent pay increases for clerical and professional employees had left them very unhappy.

George Pavlick, general manager of the Sonoma County Employees Association, said the 30 employees deserved another 2.5 per cent on Jan. 1 to bring salaries in line with private business and surrounding cities.

He said the salary survey used by the city was well prepared but was outdated and unsuccessfully urged that the dispute be placed in the hands of an impartial mediator. Pavlick said the mediation need not be binding.

The council supported City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer's contention that the survey figures were still valid and stuck to the city offer of an average 5 per cent increase. Employees affected include clerical workers, librarians, planners and technicians.

Pavlick called the city's position "unreasonable" and said he would call a meeting of employees next week to see if further action might be taken. He refused to discuss the possibility of a strike or work slowdown.

The final operating budget totaled $2,471,248, an increase of $51,677 over the preliminary budget of $2,419,571. The council in budget sessions had approved nearly all departmental requests and added to the capital outlay budget.

The operating budget and a capital outlay budget of $1,774,256 bring the total budget to $4,545,404, an increase of $444,803 over last year's budget of $3,700,601.

Meyer said, however, that the property tax rate of $1.50 per $100 assessed valuation would remain the same although the tax rate for bond redemption has not been determined.

The council also approved 5 per cent pay increases for four department heads. They included Citq Mgr. Meyer, $2,104 per month; City Engineer David A. Young, $1,867; City Atty. Edouard E. Robert, $916 for part-time and City Clerk Lillian Nommsen, $883.

In other business, the council approved the final map for 101 homes at Cambridge Square subdivision off South McDowell Boulevard.

The council adjourned to Monday at 7:30 p.m. when it will consider allotting $1,000 to the police assistance league girls drill team to help finance its $5,400-trip to Milwaukee, Wis. for national drill team competition.

Old Adobe Employees Get Raise

The Old Adobe School District board, Petaluma, last night approved a 2 per cent cost of living salary increase for all employees.

Schools Supt. Dean D. Magowan said the raise would be in addition to regular step increases for employees on the salary schedule. He told the board the increase would cost the district an additional $25,000.

The board also approved contract changes for all principals placing them on a 12-month basis to conform to the year-round schooling plan now in effect.

In other business, the board approved a work-study agreement with Sonoma State College. Students will work for a maximum of three hours each day.

In the reorganization session, the board elected William V. Youngs as chairman and Dora Eldredge as clerk. Mrs. Eldredge will begin her 17th consecutive year in that position.

The board agreed to cancel the July 20 meeting and adjourned until Aug. 3.

Takes 'Free' Liquor

A middle-aged man with wavy hair walked into the P and X Market, 688 Point San Pedro Road, San Rafael yesterday, loaded a box with liquor valued at $72, walked out without paying and sped away in a car, a clerk told police yesterday.

Larkspur Schools Get Higher Budget

Larkspur School District Board approved a $2,113,986 "publication" budget at its meeting last night.

The total was higher than the preliminary 1972-73 budget figure of $2,093,510, said business manager Gilbert L. Slusher, because income proved to be higher than anticipated.

The extra $20,476 will be spent on instruction, operations and maintenance, he said.

Board members held their annual elections and named Leon Persson president, with Howard Harvey vice president. John Boyd was elected clerk, Shirley Walker trustee representative and Curtis Kamai legislative representative.

It was agreed to continue holding the board's regular meetingat 8 p.m. at the district offices, 20 Magnolia Avenue, on the second Thursday of each month, said Milton S. Cohen, superintendent.

Any special meetings needed will be held on the fourth Thursday, he said.

The Larkspur School District Board Also:

EASEMENT — Granted a four-foot easement in the Henry C. Hall School area to the town for road access to the temporary police facility in Piper Park.

ORNITHOLOGY — Granted a parent's request that a seventh grade student be allowed to attend the ornithology program at Audubon Canyon Ranch one day a week for six weeks; permission given in line with the district's policy of individualizing students' primary interest instruction.

SUMMER SCHOOL — Heard that 450 children are attending 20 classroom activities in the district's summer school program.

Bad Check Case To Higher Court

A Marin Municipal Court judge yesterday bound over David Wade Cameron of Novato to Marin Superior Court on three felony counts of writing bad checks.

Judge David R. Baty ruled there is enough evidence to try Cameron on three counts, but dismissed a fourth.

He had been charged with writing four checks worth $300 on another person's account between June and September 1971.

Cameron is to appear July 24 in superior court.

Romanian Envoy To Israel Defects; May Be In U.S.

TEL AVIV (UPI)—A Romanian diplomat with connections to military intelligence has defected to the West, two major Israeli dailies reported Friday.

Both papers identified the diplomat as Constantin Dumitrachescu, a first secretary at the Romanian Embessy who they said recently ended his two year tour of duty here and defected 10 days ago.

One paper, Ha'Aretz said Dumitrachescu asked for political asylum in Israel. "There is a blackout on his whereabouts in Israel and on his talks," the paper said.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said the Ha'aretz report was "groundless. No foreign diplomat has asked for political asylum in Israel," he said.

Diplomatic sources said the Romanian could be in the United States.

The newspaper Yedioth said Dumitrachescu was a reserve army officer and had contacts with military intelligence. Romania has already "expressed concern" to Israel about his disappearance, the paper said, and Israel replied that "by all indications the diplomat is not in Israel."

Romania was the only Communist nation that did not break off diplomatic relations with Israel during the 1967 Middle East war.

Israeli national radio said Dumitrachescu's wife and two daughters preceeded him to Romania and were now in Bucharest.

A check at the Romanian embassy indicated its telephone had been temporarily disconnected.

Novato Chamber Budget Adopted

The Novato Chamber of Commerce board yesterday adopted a $24,362 budget for 1972-73, some $4,328 below 1971-72 expenditures.

The budget included $2,750 for promotion as compared to $9,070 spent during the past year.

Directors also approved a work program for 1972-73 including attendance by board members at city council meetings, planning commission meetings and other meetings which concern the chamber.

Directors agreed to meet on the second and fourth Thursdays at noon at various restaurants.

They voted to contribute $10 to the Rapid City, S.D., chamber of commerce, to help the city swept by floods.

Medical Gear Taken

A dozen hypodermic needles, an undetermined amount of petty cash and instruments valued at $650 were taken last night or early today from medical offices at 711 D Street, San Rafael, police reported today.

Fire Contained But It Remains Out Of Control

QUINCY (UPI)—A fire that has consumed nearly 1,600 acres of timber and watershed on the southwest slope of Mt. Hough was described as contained but not controlled today by the state Division of Forestry.

About 300 men worked through the night to contain the two-day-old fire that authorities believe was touched off by illegal fireworks.

An estimated $600,000 worth of timber, watershed and deer range has been lost in the flames, authorities said.

The fire started Wednesday afternoon at Oakland Camp near Quincy and spread up the southwest slope of the mountain.

Fire Controlled After Consuming Over 900 Acres

SONORA (UPI)—A brush and grass fire southeast of here in Tuolumne County was contained today after consuming more than 900 acres.

The state Division of Forestry said it expects to have the fire under "full control" by 8 p.m.

Authorities said children either smoking or playing with matches apparently touched off the blaze which was being fought by nearly 300 men and aerial tankers.

Stolen Cylinders May Be Dangerous

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Authorities warn that four lead cylinders stolen from a truck at Nuclear-Medical Labs. Inc. in Buena Park contain a "potentially hazardous quantity of radioactive material."

The state Department of Public Health said the cylinders, enclosed in a 6-by-6-by-10 inch lead box and without warning labels, were taken Wednesday night.

Tamalpais Club Asks Plan Review

The Tamalpais Valley Improvement Club last night asked that the county planning commission review the two-year-old master plan for the Marinview Subdivision before any further construction (beyond that already approved by the commission) is allowed.

The first four units of the project, located on the hills south of the valley, have already been completed or are in the process of completion, and include 240 apartments.

A total of nine units, with 807 apartments, are planned by developer Allan-Marin.

Lucius P. Bernard, club president, said the group also requested that the planning commission insure that any further development in the five remaining Marinview units be consistant with the county master plan and a general plan for the area recently proposed by residents.

Bernard said the Tamalpais Valley-Almonte-Homestead general plan is to be presented to the county planning commission for its approval sometime in the near future.

The current Marinview master plan is in conflict with that general plan which forbids further building on ridge lines around the valley, he said.

Colorful Names

ATLANTA (UPI) — Fannin County in northern Georgia has some of the most colorful names in the state—if not the country. They include Lickshin Mountain, Tearbritches Creek, Gravelly Gap, Black Ankle Creek, Wildcat Ridge, Frozen Knob and Fightingtown Creek.

Two Primary Schools To Remain Operable

Following the recommendation of its small schools fact-finding committee, the Reed School District board has decided to continue classes at the Tiburon and Belvedere schools.

The two schools — which house kindergarten through second grade students — were the subject of a report by a 10-man citizens committee asked to study the economics of maintaining the two schools.

The committee concluded that the district would not save enough money to warrant closing the schools.

According to District Supt. Ralph D. Giovanniello, the school board on Wednesday accepted the committee's recommendation with only board member Leo Souza dissenting.

Souza maintained that the district could save money by shutting down the two facilities.

The school board also accepted the committee's recommendation to make a districtwide study of school facilities and a thorough analysis of alternative means to save money.

According to Giovanniello, the study of school buildings and facilities will begin in September, after he prepares the preliminary groundwork. The board considered the possibility of asking the Marin County Superintendent of Schools Office to help with the facilities study.

To save money, the board last night discussed elimination of all school bus service in the district. Since some students live beyond the reach of the buses, some board members felt that the buses were inequitable and could be eliminated, at a savings of $44,000. No decision was reached.

The Reed School District Board Also:

OFFICERS — Elected its new officers: Margaret Jones, chairman, Charles Patterson, vice chairman; Kenneth G. Wells, clerk, and Souza, trustee representative.

MILEAGE ALLOWANCE — Increased car mileage allowance paid to district employees from 10 to 12 cents per mile.

DEL MAR PAINTING — Awarded a painting contract for the exterior of Del Mar School to Robert Kunst, of San Rafael, for $15,875.

EMPLOYEES STUDY — Accepted the classifications and job descriptions of school district employees prepared by the California State Personnel Board, but postponed acceptance of the proposed salary schedule until negotiations are completed.

SKILL BUILDING — Approved the inclusion of $2,520 in the district's budget for the supplemental math and reading programs being held at the Reed School.

REEDLAND WOODS — Awarded a contract to Nerviani Brothers, of San Rafael, for the installation of landscaping, turf and a sprinkler system at the Reedland Woods School.

MEETING — Adjourned to a meeting at 4 p.m. today to review the school district budget for 1972-73.

Coyotes are now found in at least 13 eastern states from Maine to Florida.

Old Candidate Is Honored By Grand-Dad Club

CHARLESTON, Ill. (AP) — John M. Gerhardt, 77, who announced that he is a candidate for President of the United States a few weeks ago, now is a member of the "Old Grand-Dad Club," and joins such nationally famous persons as Lawrence Welk, this year's Grand-Dad, and Bob Hope, last year's Grand-Dad.

Gerhardt was honored by the club when it agreed to "depart from tradition" by making him a member prior to his election to the office of President, "in recognition of your unique qualifications as a Grand-Dad, as well as a candidate."

Gerhardt threw his hat into the presidential ring full of candidates on the basis that he was "old but honest."

Southern California Earthquake Recorded

FONTANA (UPI)—A sharp brief earthquake rocked the Fontana area at 5:54 a.m. today but no damage was reported.

The Cal Tech seismological laboratory in Pasadena recorded the temblor with a reading of 3.0 on the Richter Scale and said it apparently was confined to a small area.

Church Convention Rejects War Plank

DALLAS (AP) — Delegates of the Lutheran Church in America turned down a resolution against a ceasefire in Vietnam yesterday as they finished their biennial convention.

The delegates tabled a resolution on the war, arguing they were unwilling to adopt the proposed statement without fuller discussion. The convention was working past the scheduled closing hour at that point.

Cramped Housing Agency To Move

The Marin County Housing Authority board has endorsed a plan to move most administrative and maintenance functions out of Marin City to a more central location.

Keith Kelly, assistant executive director, today said the plan was one of three possible solutions offered the authority board Wednesday to relieve the office space cramp in Marin City.

He said that while most housing authority functions would be moved, those administrative and maintenance functions directly serving Marin City residents would remain at the present housing authority headquarters on Drake Avenue.

The housing authority staff, he said, is investigating locations around San Rafael and has located a likely site at the Northgate Industrial Center.

Kelly said cost of relocating at the industrial center would include a three-year lease totaling about $46,000. He said other plans were variations on the one endorsed.

A more central location is desirable since public housing is spread throughout the county with some units as far north as Novato, Kelly said.

Other reasons include the smallness of the present office, the impracticality of remodeling the facility and the Sausalito School District's refusal to release some of its land for a maintenance building in Marin City.

Kelly said the lack of available land in Marin City is one reason for not centralizing there, as was originally planned more than a year ago.

The planned move, which would be financed by the housing authority, also would affect the Marin County Redevelopment Agency, which is linked to the housing authority since bath have essentially the same staff. The plan has not yet been presented to the redevelopment agency board.

Unknown War Tomb Is Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $15,000 tomb honoring America's unknown dead of the Vietnam War will be built this fall at Arlington National Cemetery — even though there are no unidentified U.S. dead in this war.

Cemetery planners say they have decided to go ahead anyhow, in the event one is found.

"We hope there won't be one," said Bobbie R. Beller, Arlington's project engineer. "But with the number of fatalities and the number of missing in action . . . it's possible one will be found in a final sweep of the battlefield.

"If not," Beller said, "the tomb will not be used."

Top Court Was Pretty Busy

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Supreme Court experienced another peak work load in the term ended last week—4,533 cases were docketed and 3,645 were cleared.

Final statistics showed the justices also delivered the greatest number of written opinions ever—129—even though the membership remained at seven until Jan. 7, when Justices Lewis F. Powell Jr. and William H. Rehnquist were seated.

The court heard oral arguments in 177 cases, e figure surpassed only in the 1967 term, when 180 were heard. (Some cases are decided by brief, unsigned opinions and others are combined.)

The term's docket was about double that of 10 years ago. The caseload has been rising steadily each year.

Yugoslavs Very Receptive To Sonoma State Dancers

BELGRADE (UPI) —Sandra Dunwoody said of her modern dance group "we love Yugoslavia", and to judge by the reception to their performances, the feeling must be mutual.

Mrs. Dunwoody is co-director of the Sonoma State College Dance Workshop, currently touring the alpine Yugoslav republic of Slovenia.

The youthful troupe is the first nonprofessional group to be invited to dance in the celebrated Ballet Biennial, in which are also appearing the Bolshoi Ballet and the New York Ballet.

Contacted during a rehearsal today at Ljubljana, capital of Slovenia, Mrs. Dunwoody said, "The Yugoslavs have been very receptive to our dance—it's not what they expected."

The dance group performed to a full house Wednesday at Celje, near the Austrian border. They planned a second performance tonight at Ljubljana before splitting up for the summer.

"Our program includes everything from Brahms to John Philip Sousa," Mrs. Dunwoody said.

She said Yugoslav audiences had expected the American dance group to perform jazz or rock-and-roll, and were pleasantly surprised to find what she called a "humanistic" approach to modern dance.

"We're showing them that we are not products of the Machine Age. We can move with sweetness and softness—it's a kind of nostalgia."

The lively, talkative dance instructor described the group's style as "completely eclectic—we refuse to adhere to any one system of dance theory." Most of the choreography for the group is done by the students themselves.

Two of the numbers they dance to from a recorded sound system are Ravel's "Trio Based on Paintings by Van Gogh," and Schuller's "Studies of Paul Klee." She said such numbers showed how various art forms—music, painting and dance—couldbe united in a single act.

The dance group includes 11 women and five men—all students at Sonoma between the ages of 18 and 25. "Most are not dance majors," Mrs. Dunwoody said.

Corte Madera Whittles Its Proposed Budget

The Corte Madera Town Council continued to whittle down its proposed 1972-73 budget at an adjourned meeting last night by working on the recreation department's requested budget of $64,433.

Frank Bigley, town treasurer, said councilmen succeeded in cutting the department's total, but he would not be able to work out exact figures until later today.

Final budget session is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. tomorrow, said Bigley. Councilmen have already worked on several departmental budgets, including fire and police. Remaining items unconsidered in the record budget which originally stood at $1,303,997, include the town's redevelopment agency's requested budget of $229,382.

Marin Association Doubles Members

Membership of the Marin Estates Homeowners Association is double last year's figure, members were told at the monthly meeting in Corte Madera last night, and now is over 100.

Jan Hogan, secretary, said the men of the association decided to challenge the Hilldwellers Association to a softball match on July 23 at Granada School. Plans were also made for a picnic September 17 at Corte Madera town park.

Auto Burglary

Tools and stereo equipment valued at $341 were taken Wednesday or Thursday from his car by thieves who found a misplaced key and drove the vehicle down the block, Terrance C. Moore, 162 Belvedere Street, San Rafael, told police yesterday.

Compulsory Unionism For Governments

Being held by a House of Representatives subcommittee are two bills which would legalize compulsory union membership and strikes for public employees throughout the United States.

Hearings on the two, HR 7684 and HR 12532, were completed early in May by a special House labor subcommittee. But it has made no move as yet to report either of them out for a vote.

If it does not, that is just as well. But the bills are both "alive" and could be reported out at any time — perhaps just when Congress is pushing bills through with little debate to wind up its session in time for election campaigning.

HR 7684 would void all state and local bans on strikes by government employees. It also would void "right to work" laws by which 19 states forbid compelling anyone to pay dues to a labor union to get or hold a job. It would make all terms of public employment subject to collective bargaining, and would mandate check-off of union dues from government payrolls when authorized by employees. It would create a new National Public Employee Relations Commission to govern employer-employee relations in the public field. This commission would have absolute power over such relations, with its decisions not subject to court appeal.

This bill was introduced by Rep. William L. Clay, D-Mo. He is a former business representative of the City Employees Union of St. Louis and former education coordinator of Steamfitters Union Local 562 there.

Clay introduced HR 7684 for the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. However, Jerry Wurf, AFSCME president, suggested to the subcommittee that it does not go quite far enough and should be amended to make the "agency shop" mandatory, so that every public employee would be required to pay dues to a union — even though it might not be the union of his choice.

HR 12532 by Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., the subcommittee chairman, does not go quite so far. But it goes far enough.

It would extend coverage of the National Labor Relations Act to public employees, thus putting governments in the same position as private employers — except that, of course, they could not close or relocate their plants or take other counter-measures against union demands.

SEN. GEORGE McGovern, the likely Democratic candidate for President, has endorsed the ideas embodied in these bills. In a speech to the National Education Association convention in Atlantic City on June 29, he said teachers should have the same collective bargaining rights as employees in private industry. In a subsequent press conference, he said teachers, firemen and policemen should have the right to strike.

Six days later, president Wurff of AFSCME endorsed McGovern for President.

Shirley Scheibla, writing in Barron's, hit the nail on the head as to the far-reaching effect of such measures. Their outcome, he wrote, could "be a giant step toward a U. S. labor government."

Taxpayer Has Legal Pliers To Squeeze Assessment

By RUS WALTON

In the previous column we were distilling some of the wisdom and experience of one Donald K. Hoates, author of the book "How to Fight a Windmill."

As Old Don points out, property owners have available a pair of legal pliers which can be used to try to get their assessed values lowered.

The first half of those pliers is Section 110 of the state Revenue and Taxation Code. It defines "full cash value" and tells how the assessor must determine the value of your property.

The second half of the pliers is Section 408 of the tax code. It forces the assessor to detail for you exactly how he reached that assessment on your home.

HERE IS WHAT the law says:

R & T 408 (b): "The assessor . . . shall provide such data to an assessee of property or his designated representative upon request and shall permit an assessee . . to inspect at the assessor's office any information and records . . . . . relating to the appraisal and assessment of his property . . . ."

R & T 408 (d): " . . . 'market data' means any information in the assessor's possession . . . relating to the sale of any property comparable to the property of the assessee, if the assessor bases his assessment . . . in whole or in part, on such comparable sale or sales. The assessor shall provide the names of the seller and buyer of each property . . . the location of such property, the date of the sale and the consideration paid for the property . . . ."

Once you have this information, tour those "comparable" properties, check with the owners and see just how "comaparable" the properties really are.

Don't take the assessor's word for it, see for yourself.

MAYBE THE OLD boy's right. If he is, you don't have a case so put your sword back in the closet. But if he's wrong — if those other "comparable" properties are not comparable, if they are in another neighborhood, if they are on a quiet cul-de-sac and you're on a busy highway, if the other folks see trees out their back window and all you see is smokestacks — well, you've got a good case. Stick with it.

Write your assessor and ask for a review of your assessments. Tell him you'd like a hearing. Be nice, but firm.

Remember, the limited time period for filing an appeal is from July 2 to Aug. 26. You have to get into orbit during that time or you blow the whole thing.

When your hearing is set, have all your facts and data together and make your presentation. Get some friends and neighbors together, and get them to do the same; that will help. As a matter of fact, if you could get the whole neighborhood to appeal their assessments, you'd get things done! The bureaucrats would get the message. It never hurts to rattle a few cages.

MAYBE WE CAN get something done about this crazy system which penalizes a guy for improving his house and rewards the fella who lets things go to pot. I suppose the idea of taxing the land and not the improvements is too logical and too sensible for the political mind. Incentives seem to be anathema to bureaucrats.

It's time the property owners — the middle Americans who tote the barge and lift the bales — get their backs up. Between dumping easy-spending incumbents and using those pliers on the assessors, taxpayers can make their case, — loud and clear. And that is what it takes to put a lid on taxes — not just tax rates, taxes!

So, even if the Sacramento-Babylon does come up with something resembling property tax relief, jousting with the assessor is important. It may save you money. And it can remind our public officials that Mr. and Mrs. John Q. are still, in fact, the government, and want a fair shake.

"Decide, Alberta, once and for all. It's either the 10th Precinct or us."

Driver Politeness On Bridge Phenomenal

The politeness of the drivers in the San Francisco region is one of the most pleasant phenomena of the times.

I have driven across the Golden Gate Bridge many thousands of times since its construction. No one has ever blown a horn at me — nor have I heard horns blown at anyone else at the toll plaza.

Executed Killer Cannot Murder Again

I have read with great interest the survey taken by the Independent-Journal as to the attitude of its readers toward the death penalty as well as your editorial on the subject. I am inclined to agree with you that a study of the 5-to-4 decision of United States Supreme Court in reference to this subject leaves something to be desired. In fact, in this instance the tergiversations of the majority of the court takes on the aspects of a group of theologians of the Middle Ages debating as to how many angels can dance on the point of a needle.

Liberals are generally in agreement that there are only three possible reasons for punishing law breakers: revenge, reformation, or deterrence by example. All civilized persons would consider the first as barbarous. There is little hope for reformation of the criminal in a society where a man is considered to be a product of forces and not of his own will. Deterrence by example may prevent the commission of some crimes but it would appear of not too great influence when you read of persons adjudged guilty in a lower court committing further crimes while free pending appeal.

There is a fourth reason which is seldom mentioned and which in my mind justifies the death penalty in the case of first degree murder. That is, an executed murderer never murders again.

To illustrate this reason it is not necessary to go outside the County of Marin. I recall that 20 years or so ago a man named Joseph Corbett committed a murder in this county. He was tried and although all the evidence as given in the news releases indicated him to be an amoral man with an ungovernable temper who killed for the pleasure of it, he was sentenced to jail rather than given the death penalty. Approximately 10 years ago he either escaped jail or was paroled. A short time thereafter he was captured following his kidnap-murder of Adolph Coors in the state of Colorado. Mr. Coors was an exemplary citizen and philanthropist and his death was a loss to society.

If Joseph Corbett had been executed for the crime committed here, further tragedy would have been avoided. Who has the best right to live, a known murderer or the unknown person who would be his next victim?

Report On 'The Pill' Held Full Of Errors

Your June 26 issue ran an article in regard to research on the birth control pill. You should be advised that such articles, appearing throughout the U.S., are misleading in part and erroneous in other parts. Since those articles have been consistent in this respect I can only assume that this is an intentional effort to mislead and confuse the public by the sponsors, the drug industry.

As a result of both English and Scandinavian studies the advisory committee on obstetrics and gynecology to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration issued a report in August of 1969. Their conclusions in part were that there was definitely an increased risk of thromboembolic disease attributable to the use of the pill. The increased risk was anywhere from a low of 3X to a high of approximately 10X that of non-users. The British studies of Drs. Vesey and Doll show an increased risk of between seven to tenfold increase in mortality due to thromboembolic diseases in women taking oral contraceptives. These study results were released in April, 1968.

The report of the advisory committee to the FDA may be obtained through the U.S. Printing Office, Washington, D.C.

The medical director of one of the main manufacturers of the pill had his results analyzed by this committee, which stated his evidence was inadequate. I believe that judgment to be not only restrained and objective but kindly. The alleged Pincus studies and Puerto Rico experiments have by now been almost completely discredited and are not generally relied on at all by anyone having familiarity with the pill. Those studies had several weaknesses some of which appear in your recent article.

1. The statement that no evidence shows that the pill causes cancer of the cervix. This is misleading to say the least since studies are not complete at all and cannot be for probably 15 years . . .

2. Figures are loosely used in such a fashion that upon analysis they show nothing except the inadequacy of the research methods . . .

3. The "checkup" figures set forth in the article have their own built-in error . . .

Even Dr. Guttmacher, one of the chief exponents of the pill and president of Planned Parenthood, when testifying before a U.S. Senate subcommittee in 1970 did not attempt to rely on the so-called Puerto Rican studies. He also admitted grudgingly that the English studies were correct and he would warn people of the possible side effects such as thromboembolism. In his paper which supplements his testimony he quotes the risk as being 10 times higher for users as compared to the non-users of the pill . . .

I trust that in the future you would avail yourself of the full truth before allowing your fine paper to be used in such a deceitful enterprise as this.

In 1898 President William McKinley signed a joint resolution of Congress authorizing the annexation of Hawaii by the United States.

In 1941 President Franklin D. Roosevelt told Congress that U.S. naval forces, moving to forestall a possible Nazi invasion, had landed on Iceland with that country's permission.

In 1970 forty-six persons were shot during rioting by blacks in Asbury Park, N.J.

Democrats' Reform Confusion Will Become Republicans', Too

MIAMI BEACH — Republican Party leaders better quit gloating over the trials and troubles the Democrats are having putting together their convention with a fair prospect of orderly behavior.

The GOP politicians are next time going to be faced with the same kind of divisive conditions which the Democrats are faced with now. And the Republicans would be in the same situation next month if there was any serious contest within the party over either the nomination or the platform.

Right now the Democrats are suffering the growing pains of party reform and many of the old-time regulars don't like it. They don't like being shouldered out of power positions, seeing a majoirty of the delegates chosen openly by popular vote and not knowing whether the "interlopers" are going to be nice if they don't get their own way: that is, if they don't get George McGovern.

It's healthy.

THIS DEMOCRATIC convention is better off with the confusion of reform than with outdated bossism and with leadership cliques brokering the nomination.

At the moment it is easy for Republicans to wishfully hope that the Democratic convention will explode with internal combustion because the reforms have opened it widely to new forces, new faces, new ideas and a determination by the newcomers to shake the machinery until it rattles.

The Republicans can't afford to put off similar convention reform very long.

Either the Republicans will open their delegate elections and convention committees to the same sweep of reform that the Democrats have so bravely and painfully carried through — or else.

The "or else" is that if they reject such reform the GOP leaders will be posting fateful notices saying: "Ours is a closed tent; beware the elephant, or he will step on you!"

IT IS ONLY the fact that the Republicans have an incumbent President which postpones the pressure for this kind of reform this year. But the pressures will build and the GOP leadership will yield to them or it will become more of a minority party than it now is.

This is why it would be well for Republicans to ponder more understandingly the headaches which the Democrats are temporarily experiencing to see if the GOP can't achieve the substance of convention reform while avoiding its pitfalls.

Here are the changes the Democratic reform commission sought — and they are worthwhile:

End the "unit rule" so that each delegate is free to vote his convictions.

Require that all state delegations be democratically chosen.

Ensure that each state delegation and all convention committees are fairly balanced among whites, blacks and women.

But delegate contests piled up before the credentials committee and brought lacerating controversy. What happened is that the Democratic voters in many states did not elect as many blacks or women as the reformers wanted and the continuing dispute is whether majority rule should yield to preconceived quotas.

ENDING THE UNIT rule is also not simple. The reformers got agreement that there would be no more unit voting at the convention, but can a convention rule supersede the law of a state, such as in the case of California? It prescribes that a candidate who gets even a thin majority of the popular vote in the primary shall get all of the delegates and that they must vote as a unit at the convention.

The Republicans may see a way around some of these inconsistencies, but they cannot escape comparable reform.

Until the American people find a way democratically to nominate their presidential candidates, it cannot be said that they democratically choose their Presidents.

Weak Attack On Consumer Agency Merely Post-Mortem

WASHINGTON — Americans in general — those millions who buy mass-produced goods, rather than the thousands who profit from their sales — are about to get a federal agency to speak specifically for them, and it is about time. Yet even at this late date, after both houses of Congress have passed bills to create an independent consumer protection agency and the only force that might stop it is a presidential veto, the enterprises that have been huckstering shoddy goods all these years still have not given up the fight to keep right on doing so.

At every step through lopsided passage by the House last October (344-44) and the Senate last month (69-10), the idea was fought by chambers of commerce, major manufacturers, a "task force" of some 150 Washington lobbyists, and the administration. While avowing agreement with the bill's objectives, Mr. Nixon's spokesmen wanted to subordinate the new body within Justice or another existing department — thus depriving it of the independence which is the whole reason for its being.

Although all that high-powered opposition has been overcome, yet another brief has been drawn up against the bill by Ralph K. Winter Jr., a Yale law professor whose analysis is issued under the imprimatur of the conservative American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research. Winter's effort is interesting as a post-mortem, a belated attempt to prove that the consumer advocates who urged passage of the measure are really working against the interests of the American consumer at large

I SAY SO on the assumption that Mr. Nixon knows this is a leap year, when by tradition a presidential election will occur. If he has been notified of that, he is unlikely to veto the creation of an agency with such a wide constituency, passed by such wide margins in both houses, despite the fact that its opponents are among his lifetime allies. Thus the chance that Winter's argument might have been used as the nucleus of a veto message is now remote indeed.

Still, as a dsiplay of the doggedness with which Yale legal talent will labor to produce a sow's ear from the sleekest of silk purses, it is worth study. The consumer protection agency (styled the Food, Drug and Consumer Product Agency in the Senate version) is en route to reality, but legal spaciousness will live to bamboozle another day, and trade associations to pay for it.

The burden of Winter's case is that even if the agency turns out to be effective, it will impose "a particular ideology of consumerism upon consumers. To be sure, some consumers may be helped but many others will be hurt . . . Consumers would almost surely be better off without such regulation and with the money they pay in taxes to buy more safety and information."

HE MEANS, when he hammers at "a particular ideology of consumerism," that those consumers who want safer products that are as advertised, who want to know what they are buying, might be served by the agency — but those who don't want safer products, who enjoy being misled by false commercials and don't care what goes into the foods they eat would not be served. It is such a weak suggestion it is no wonder he advances it halfheartedly, saying "Some consumers may be helped . . . " and "Consumers would almost surely be better off . . . "

Winter cripples his own argument early when he concedes major fundamental reasons for an independent agency. That is, existing regulatory agencies are guilty of laziness, political influence, and especially servitude to the industries they purport to regulate. Yet somehow he concludes that because these captive agencies have failed to control their captors, any government office, however independent of ties to specific business or industry, will also fail.

If that line ever had any convincing force to it, it would have been before the creation and operation for two years of the Environmental Protection Agency. All the same advance criticisms could have been made of that concept, and were. But the EPA has become a major force for the American people at large, as opposed to the corporate forces that always assumed the profit motive was holy enough to exempt them from anti-pollution measures.

EPA IS SUCH a force because it is independent, and because the man appointed to head it has turned out to be strong and perhaps ambitious beyond the temptations that have made a shrugging mockery of the other "regulatory" agencies. There is every reason to hope a consumer protection agency would work the same way, would be effective largely because it is uncorrupted and unspecialized, and might turn its attention on any given offender on any given day. The opponents of the new agency seem not to have considered that what makes it work might be its existence as a moral threat.

On the other hand, that is probably what scares them most.

New Stinson Beach Sewer Plan Opposed As Too Costly

A small-scale rebellion appears to be taking shape in Stinson Beach against the latest proposal for a waste treatment and disposal system for that community.

It appears that the West Marin Community's 450 residents will veto plans for the newest project and take their chances with state and regional water quality control officials, who have ordered a disposal system for the community.

Residents turned thumbs down on an earlier project, an $8.1 million system in conjunction with Bolinas which was later killed by the state last year, and punctuated their displeasure by ousting three directors of the Stinson Beach County Water District who had supported the huge project.

Now there is a new water district board and a new plan for a treatment-disposal system. But many residents believe the proposed system is not feasible for tiny Stinson Beach.

Since the new board members have agreed that no project will be undertaken until it has been put to a vote, the new plan may never be implemented. (Meanwhile, Stinson residents already owe more than $300,000 for engineering work on both projects.)

RESIDENTS SAY the major problem with the new plan is that it, too, costs too much and would wreak financial hardship on individual property owners.

Stinson's share of the cost of the now-defunct project with Bolinas was to have been about $3 million. The system now under consideration would cost the community about $2.5 million, after money from federal and state grants.

This means the average homeowner with a sewer connection would have to pay approximately $7,500, spread over a 25-year period.

Residents argue this is unreasonable for a system which may benefit the Bolinas Lagoon by helping to unpollute it, but will not do much for the property owner who is now quite content to dispose of his wastes via septic tank.

The latest project has also caused concern because of a dam proposed for the hill above the community. Some residents fear that an earthquake could bring 35 million gallons of water down on the community if the dam failed.

THE BIG HANGUP in planning a system for Stinson comes from the fact that state water officials are opposed to having any effluent (even if it is so pure to be drinkable) dumped into tidal waterways, including the lagoon and the ocean.

Because of this, any system for Stinson, with its high tidal water table and non-absorbent soil, is bound to be expensive. "Many people out here feel the regulatory agencies' demands are capricious and unrealistic," said John L. Jones, a director of the county water district.

If Stinson refuses to build a disposal system, what will water quality officials do? A lot of people seem to think that no punitive action will be taken against residents.

They contend that any move to force residents from their homes on the grounds those homes are polluting the lagoon would be politically unrealistic.

If officialdom decides to act by allowing no new development out in that area, many residents would be just as happy.

As one resident put it: "If those state water boys want us to build a sewer system, they'll either have to pay most of the cost themselves or use some of our tax money to develop systems which will be financially feasible for little communities. They can't expect us to do the impossible."

COUNTY COMMENT

By WILLIAM D. (BILL) FUSSELMAN

No Need For Board's Hurry In Adopting County Budget

Last week, in speaking of the shameful running through the budget hearings in a scant eight days, I said they didn't have to do it as there was plenty of time. Restating: the code provides that on or before the 10th of August (not June) the budget shall be presented and that on or before the 20th of August (not June) the final budget shall be approved, and that on or before Sept. 1 the tax rate shall be set.

Last Monday the "Remember When" column demonstrated this had always been understood. This is the way it went: "10 years ago — July 3. . . Marin County Auditor Michael Mitchell estimated the county's budget for fiscal 1963 would call for a tax of $2.08 per $100 assessed valuation unless reduced at the final hearings in August. This would be up 3 cents from the previous year."

In writing the code there was never any thought of having the proceedings completed before the beginning of the fiscal year (July 1).

THERE ARE A NUMBER of interesting provisions governing general law counties such as Marin. For instance: If for any reason a county board of supervisors fails to adopt a budget or tax rate, that county would be permitted to continue its normal functions, but would be limited to spending no more than the preceding year. Anticipation warrants would be issued if reserves should be used up.

There is a rule that no board of supervisors may obligate a future board of supervisors. Question:? When does a board become a future board?

There is always an itch to start spending county funds immediately come July 1, for such things as additional personnel or capital improvements. There was a time when this eagerness could be understood and excused.

This was after World War II. Roads were in bad shape because of wartime federal control of materials. While plans were being prepared and bids called for, examined and contracts awarded, the good construction weather was slipping by. Many jobs were not completed before the bad weather set in; by spring a lot of the work would be unfit for acceptance and would have to be done over. This resulted in some jockeying with the code.

NO MORE now. There is no justification for not taking the full time to thoroughly go over the budgets, let you, the taxpayers, have every opportunity to be informed and have your day at the hearings. As a matter of fact, the public should be urged to become involved and let their thoughts be known.

This doesn't mean that with a population of over 200,000 that any 200 that can be crowded in on one day of the hearings hardly represents the thinking of you, Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer. No indeed!

Group's Finding Is Not So New

TEL AVIV (UPI)—The International Symposium on Sex Education has discovered what some people may have suspected: sex is fun.

The symposium, winding up four days of meetings attended by 650 physicians, educators and social workers, passed a resolution Thursday stating: "Sex is an essential and enjoyable part of human life."

Other resolutions said "sex education is a life-long process that begins soon after birth" and "in sex education attention should be given to all forms of sexual outlets."

Man Is Being Held As 'Subway Kisser'

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 26-year-old man was arrested Thursday and accused of being the "subway kisser."

Police said at least 15 women had complained that a man kissed them if they fell asleep or closed their eyes. The kisser usually made his move during rush hours.

Marcel's Place, Off The Path But Worth The Extra Effort

Trinity County is a long way from this writer's regular restaurant beat, but there are many Marinites already acquainted with Marcel's Place — and several who, over the years, have told me about it.

Closest town to Marcel's is Hyampom on the south fork of the Trinity River and at the end of the paved road. After that there are another 11 miles on dirt, over a mountain and back down to the river.

My wife and I tried to make it here four years ago, but the last two miles were too much for us and we turned chicken, hoping we'd get a second chance at it another day.

That second chance came last week and this column is now being typed on a fruit crate in front of an old tent. Our camp is about 200 yards from the river where there may be a morning fisherman or two, but the best catches are made upstream.

Those last 11 miles are much improved now and most any vehicle can make them. But I am sure Marcel's is just the way it was before — a great place for families to come and they do so on weekends and vacations any good month of the year.

Guests are never solicited. They simply appear on someone's personal recommendation. Once you have met him you are likely to become a friend of Marcel Colas for life. At least you'll never forget him and he won't forget you — even after a long absence.

Marcel (now 83) founded this informal Trinity County resort 40 years ago after retiring from a successful hotel and restaurant career. Early San Franciscans may recall him as a feisty little Frenchman of Huguenot stock, who was once maitre d' at the St. Francis Hotel, although he also served at the Palace, Stewart and Whitcomb at various times.

He took this scenic 160 acres and built a rambling hostelry out of logs, limbs, shakes, roofing paper and metal siding. Over the years these components have been replaced or patched from time to time in casual architectural form. But they all seem to hold together.

You bring your own gear and perhaps a tent, although the latter is usually furnished. Camping sites with sanitary facilities are spaced between the river and a large meadow, under old oaks, madrones, firs and redwoods.

Marcel's meals are not a la St. Francis, but are robust, simple country fare such as boiled beef, ham, barbecued chicken served in a long, roofed and screened enclosure which also houses the kitchen. Guests (some overnight, some for dinner) were expected to number about 65 over the Fourth of July. Frequently they pitch in serving, clearing the table or washing dishes.

Your host is probably just as brighteyed and feisty as he was years ago. He doesn't wear glasses and is up at 5:30 or 6 a.m. Hardy people, these Huguenots must have been.

Readers, who haven't visited Marcel's for a long time and would like to turn back the years, will find things little changed since their last trip — except perhaps for Marcel's account of his past experiences. I'm told there are some incidents which have become much more dramatic in constant retelling.

SUNDAY BRUNCH is popular at the Sand Dollar in Stinson Beach these days. And, for that matter, so is Saturday's lunch. Served on the patio.

Otherwise, new owner Ken Rands keeps this restaurant open Thursday, Friday and Saturday evening during the summer season, the same as his predecessor Al Engel did before him.

But there is now a wider variety to the menu, with fresh fish everyday, broiled Alaska king crab legs, shrimp crepes, beef Bourguignon and beef medallions madeira.

Shops in the Stinson Beach are now open to 9 p.m. on Saturday nights, so you can combine a buying trip with an evening meal. The San Dollar now has its seasonal full liquor license in effect.

THE "NEW LOOK" at Le Tonneau Restaurant in Corte Madera is now ready for inspection.

If you haven't drifted in during the past few evenings it will be worth your interest to make a special trip just to see what owners Angelo Camilleri, Bernard Epstein and John Napoli have been concocting these past several weeks.

And if you are in your 50s or older, the scene may be a familiar one from your early years. If you are younger, you'll just have to take it as authentic that what you see is a condensation of the era of the speakeasy, Al Capone and Machine Gun Kelly.

At the door you'll undergo inspection and be asked to identify yourself (just in case you turn out to be a prohibition or FBI agent). Inside you'll probably find the staff resembling a collection of hoods and molls more than anything else.

And there's quite a collection of dangerous characters photographed for wall decorations. Strangely enough, you may just recognize them — or some of them, as your Marin neighbors. Who would have thought that such respectable people would be on a wanted list.

You can, if you like, enter into the spirit of the occasion by preparing for it in advance. Dig out that broad-shouldered, wide-lapel, double-breasted suit you used to sport (if you can still wear it), that wide-brimmed hat laid away on the shelf and make it an evening of fun.

SPEAKING OF SPEAKEASIES, did you know the old Alibi Club on Fourth Street, San Rafael was quite a notorious place during prohibition days?

The fireplace opened into a tunnel and stairway that led to the cellar. Baby Face Nelson and Dillinger used to hide out there.

YOU'VE BEEN AROUND Marin quite a while if you still remember these popular eating places:

Marvel Mar on the Redwood Highway in Mill Valley; the Ranch Wagon that was at the same location later; Hamie's on Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael; Buon Gusto's in Fairfax; The Brick Lodge on downtown Fourth Street, San Rafael; Corey's, a few blocks farther west on Fourth and on the opposite side of the street.

Then there was Maison Marin in Novato — and Little Sweden at the same spot later. And Pierre's Cave du Vin in Sausalito, when it was operated by Maurice Guridi — who also used to operate the Casa Madrona Hotel there. I wonder what ever happened to Maurice. He was quite a chef, worked for a while at Le Chalet Basque in Santa Venetia.

THE CAPTAIN'S CLAMS are still a favorite at the Grotto in San Rafael, but Ursula Valan (never satisfied with satisfaction) has another dish that is going over well.

This is her off-season crab cioppino, or lazy man's cioppino, and you don't need to take a bath when you finish. It contains shelled crab, clams and shrimp, cooked in a cioppino sauce — a big meal for $3.50.

Hearing Slated In Credit Card Case

A Daly City man charged with three felony credit card violations has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court. A preliminary hearing was scheduled fro July 25 for Max Ralph Toscano, 24.

Sausalito police arrested him June 25 after he had obtained $25 worth of clothing from the SGA of Finland clothiers and a $25 tapestry from Waterbed Experience.

He was then charged with acquiring a credit card without the owner's consent, obtaining goods with it and forging a credit card slip.

Agnew Questions Legal Services Program Path

HOUSTON (UPI)—The Legal Services Program, designed to provide free legal help to the poor, is used by some poverty program attorneys as a platform for social engineering on a grand sale, Vice President Spiro Agnew said today.

Agnew, speaking to the 90th annual convention of the Texas State Bar Association, said the program was conceived as an arm of the war on poverty, but has been used to transfer great power in community affairs from elected officials to self appointed ones.

"I want to emphasize that I am very much in favor of providing legal services for the poor," Agnew said. "Inability to afford counsel should not and must not affect one's right to justice.

"But throughout this program's existence there has been little serious examination of its philosophical underpinnings," he said. "We have tended to focus on the delivery systems—whether to praise or criticize them—and we have lost sight of the larger implications."

He said the program had gone beyond the idea of a governmentally funded program to make legal remedies available to the poor and now expends much of its resources on efforts to change the law on behalf of one social class, the poor.

"To the extent that this is true, what we have here is the federal government funding a program designed to effectuate major political changes," he said. "What we may be on the way to creating is a federally-funded system manned by ideological vigilantes, who owe their allegiance not to a client, but only to a concept of social reform."

The legal services program has seized upon the idea of the law and lawsuit as an offensive weapon to redress an alleged imbalance created by the political process, Agnew said.

"Program attorneys have been heavily involved in every social issue of the day," he said. "In Evanston, Ill., it's draft counseling; in Texas, California, Colorado, Florida and other places, it's undergrouund newspapers. The list of causes is endless."

He said that program attorneys have little or nothing to do with poverty and the problems peculiar to the poor. He said program attorneys should concentrate on legal services to the poor, with law reform as a by-product of those services.

He also said legal services headquarters should establish policies and priorities applicable to all projects, including regulations on attorneys' private political activities, group representation and soliciting clients.

Blood Transfusion Given Chichester

LONDON (UPI) — Sir Francis Chichester has been given a blood transfusion and is still weak, his son Giles said Thursday. "It now seems possible he will spend about two weeks in hospital," Giles said. "He is quite cheerful."

Chichester, 70, dropped out of the Observer Singlehanded Transatlantic Yacht Race last week after becoming ill at sea. His son and a Royal Navy crew helped him sail his ketch Gipsy Moth V back to Plymouth, wherehe was admitted to the Royal Naval Hospital.

Felony Charge Is Dismissed

Felony charges against a San Rafael man arrested in a stolen rental car have been dismissed because the clerk who rented the car said he was not the one who had taken the car.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Raymond E. Gilbert said he moved for dismissal of the counts against 21-year-old William Eugene Cody because the clerk said none of the men in a lineup, including Cody, had rented a car from him that was not returned.

Cody was arrested Sunday in Marin City by sheriff's deputies responding to an unfounded report of an assault at 33 Burgess Court. They found Cody sitting in an Avis rental car stolen June 10 from Hooks Enco service station in San Rafael.

Cody had been charged with illegally possessing another person's credit card, forging a credit card slip and auto theft.

Proxmire Tries Cut Of Personal Servant Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said today he would try to cut the funds for personal servants of American officials out of the foreign aid appropriations bill.

Proxmire, who heads the Senate Foreign Operations subcommittee considering the bill, complained the Agency for International Development (AID) "promotes a snobbish American image abroad" by providing household servants for its mission directors.

Proxmire conceded that in less developed countries wealthy upper class members often have personal servants. But he then asked if it was wise to have American AID officials identified with the small percentage of wealthy people in those countries.

Proxmire said thet during hearings on the bill it was discovered that mission directors in 32 countries were provided residence allowances which included money for personal servants.

Proxmire said that one AID official defended the allowance on the grounds that in some countries "you have to have a servant to bring in the coal or wood to heat your house."

AID foreign service officers are paid an average annual wage and post differential of $26,000, plus free housing or housing allowance.

KELLEY HOOK, 11, checks for an available tennis court at the Tiburon Peninsula Club from her hilltop Tiburon home. Tennis Is A Family Affair, And Kelley Hook Shows It

By PAT BALMES

Kelley Hook, 11, is the only girl from Marin County competing in the national junior tennis championship matches for 12 through 14-year-olds being held at Belvedere Tennis Club this week through Sunday.

Tennis is a family affair at her Tiburon home. Her stepfather, Tiburon Peninsula Club tennis professional Mike Hook, encourages Kelley and her sisters, Dorsey, 14, and Stacey, 17.

Dorsey will play in her age division of the national junior championship at Burlingame this week.

"Kelley, of all my daughters, has the most ability; she started early. We never have to mention practicing. She goes and gets herself a game. She is not lazy about anything. She is an 'A' student," said her mother, Sonja Hook.

KELLEY STARTED hitting balls with a junior-size racket when she was 5, played games at 6 and competed in her first tournament at 7.

During the school year she bicycles to TPC directly from Del Mar School at 3:30 p.m. to practice for three hours. She plays mostly with boys — they hit harder.

Working men and women have priority on TPC courts after 4 p.m., so Kelley plays against women occasionally. Sometimes she waitu to play until 6 p.m. when everybody else is at dinner.

"Many people do not want to arrange their lives around tennis, but I don't mind serving dinner at 9 p.m. Living close to the courts helps," Mrs. Hook said. Their hilltop house affords a view of the tennis courts far below and with binoculars she can see her husband giving lessons.

"I am all for tennis. I know what my girls are doing all the time," said Mrs. Hook.

IN THE SUMMERTIME Kelley and her sisters are at the club all day unless they are in a tournament. When youngsters elevate over group play, they like to go to tournaments. Kelley will play in a dozen this summer.

Mrs. Hook takes turns with other girls' parents driving the youngsters to matches as far away as Reno, Nev., where players are housed by members of the hosting tennis club. Often Kelley already knows her hosts, whose daughters play all over Northern California.

"At first Kelley was shy about housing and I went with her," said Mrs. Hook.

Kelley still likes her to come to see her play.

"It's an advantage to have a dad who has played in tournaments; he knows how hard it is and how disappointing to lose. Mike has more youngsters ranked than the average professional; 18 out of 85 junior students," said Mrs. Hook.

The best fun in tennis are the tournaments, Kelley said. There are dinner parties, swim parties and dances.

Seven young competitors are staying at the Hooks' house this week. The Hooks are giving a party tonight for all the boys and girls Kelley's age who were competing — a swim at a neighbor's pool, dinner at home and a "fun" round robin at 7 p.m. at the Tiburon Peninsula Club.

Martha Mitchell: A Political Prisoner Who's Been Freed

By HELEN THOMAS
(Last of two articles)

WASHINGTON (UPI)—When John N. Mitchell resigned as attorney general to direct President Nixon's re-election campaign, reporters were as interested in his wife's views on the move as his own.

Martha Mitchell never disclosed family secrets but she made clear she resented the idea. Officially, reporters were told Mrs. Mitchell would have "no comment."

But the outspoken Mrs. Mitchell turned to one of her by now-famous tactics, the telephone. She called a reporter. In no uncertain terms she made plain she was most unhappy that her husband was leaving the Cabinet to take up the political cudgels again.

The Committee to Re-Elect Nixon gave her an office, two secretaries to handle her mail and public eppearances, and a security agent.

THERE WERE indications that Mitchell himself was reluctant to go back into active politics, but when the President asks there can be no question of refusal.

From that point, Martha's zest seemed to fly out the window. Booked for appearances at four major regional Republican women's conferences, she showed up for two. Her aides said she had not been feeling well.

It appeared she was being "programmed" and Martha Mitchell resents dictation.

She is extremely loyal to the Republican party and to the President. But there is little doubt she hated it when she and her husband left the official Cabinet family, knowing full well she would lose some of her own power base and celebrity status.

She had been out of the limelight for many weeks when, three weeks ago, she flew to California with her husband to attend a Hollywood dinner where they and Mrs. Nixon were to be guests of honor. That weekend reports of an alleged break-in and bugging of the Democratic National Committee headquarters by men hired by the Re-Elect Nixon Committee's security agents made headlines.

MITCHELL RETURNED to Washington and "suggested" that Martha remain in Newport Beach where they, their daughter, Mitchell's secretary Lee Jablonski and a security agent were staying.

On June 23, Martha called me from California and in her conversation, and following a question on the bugging incident, she said she had given her husband an "ultimatum" to get out of politics or she would leave him.

"I gave him an ultimatum," she told me. "I'm sick and tired of the whole operation."

Before she could go on, I heard her protest: "You just get away."

At that point our conversation was broken and attempts to get her back met with word from the operator, "Mrs. Mitchell is indisposed and cannot talk"

Her husband did not appear perturbed when I reached him at his Washington apartment. "Martha has never been happy with me in politics," he said.

"We have a compact," he confided. "We have;agreed, we're going to get the hell out of this gambit. We aren't going to be in Washington after Nov. 7. We're going to leave lock, stock and barrel. We have that understanding. We're going to get out of this rat race."

Mitchell did not seem to mind Martha's going to the press with her troubtes. "She's great," he said. "I love her so much. She gets a little upset about politics but she loves me and I love her and that's what counts."

MARTHA REMAINED in seclusion in the Newporter Inn following the interrupted phone call. On June 24, she abruptly flew to the Westchester Country Club at Rye, N.Y., the town where the Mitchells had lived before Washington. Mitchell's secretary brought their daughter Marty back to Washington to stay with friends.

The following morning, sounding distraught, Mrs. Mitchell called me again to vent her fury at the security agent who she said had pulled the telephone out of the wall Thursday evening.

Tearfully, she said she was leaving her husband "until he decides to leave" Nixon's re-election campaign.

She complained of being a "political prisoner."

"It's horrible to me," she said. "I've been through so much. I don't like it. Vartha isn't going to stand for it.

"I love my husband very much, but I'm not going to stand for all those dirty things that go on."

She told another reporter that five guards "threw me down on the bed and stuck a needle in my behind."

"I was a patriot until I got assassinated," she said. "What country can I go to?"

MITCHELL FLEW to New York to be with his wife. Two days later they slipped out of the country club hotel without speaking to reporters. On July 1, Mitchell announced he was giving up his job as No. 1 strategist in Nixon's campaign. He will remein as an adviser. A committee spokesman said the Mitchells would be moving back to New York although it was not clear how soon.

Early Sunday, Mrs. Mitchell called me again. "I am still a political prisoner," she whispered "I can't talk long."

Was she happy with her husband's decision?

"Sure, that's what I wanted," she said, then abruptly hung up.

Nancy Ann Pridmore Is Betrothed

Nancy was graduated from San Rafael High School and St. Francis Hospital School of Nursing in San Francisco. She is employed at Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children in San Francisco.

Bruce is a graduate of St. Ignatius High School and the University of California. He is employed by the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco. The future bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wayne D. Allbin of San Francisco.

A late summer wedding is planned by the couple.

Prostaglandins Prove Successful In Labor

AUGUSTA, Mich. (UPI)—Prostaglandins have been administered experimentally to induce labor at term in about 5,000 women throughout the world with successful results in a high percentage of cases, scientists meeting here were told recently.

The report on the prostaglandins was made at a meeting attended by 60 scientists from 16 countries. Prostaglandins—a 14-member family of fatty acids found in tiny amounts in most tissues of the body—are expected to have a wide range of medical applications. These range from regulating fertility to inducing labor and therapeutic abortion.

A New Court Ruling Given On 'Potato Chips'

Potato chips must be labeled so the consumer will know if the product is made from "real" or dehydrated potatoes, according to a federal appellate court ruling in St. Louis, Mo.

Traditionally, the potato chips, invented by an Indian chief, George Crum, in 1853, are made of slices of raw potatoes deep fried.

Judge Warren K. Urbom ruled that the phrase "potato chips" standing alone, is a generic term which is capable of including both chips made of raw potatoes and those made of dehydrated potatoes. However manufacturers were told to label the product prominently to protect the consumer.

ON BEING BLACK

Moral Decision: Apartheid, U.S. Firms In S. Africa

By SANDRA HAGGERTY
(Los Angeles Times Syndicate)

"I sympathize, yeah, but what has South Africa got to do directly with me?" asked the black man in all seriousness. "Even though I'm black, I'm an American. I've never even been to Africa. The problems of South Africa seem remote and detached from me."

The man was speaking in response to the content and conclusions of recent African liberation conferences.

For far too many years, South Africa has received what has amounted to an audible "tsk tsk" from the United States regarding its apartheid policies. Still, U.S. investments and businesses continue to flourish in South Africa, hence supporting its racist way of life as well as its economy.

Experts (black and white) appear divided on whether or not the U.S. should pull out all its industry and business in South Africa in an open protest against its apartheid policies. Those in favor of the United States remaining contend that taking out U.S. investments would simultaneously put millions of South African blacks out of work. This position seems to uphold the idea that negligible salaries for blacks are better than no salaries at all.

BUT WHAT has life for South African blacks got to do with life for American blacks in these civilized United States? After all, we are not required to carry passes at all times. We do not need special permits to change jobs and travel from town to town. We are not required to go around verbalizing "danke baas" to every white man we see in appreciation for the mere air we breathe. We are not forbidden, by law, to be in a supervisory position over a white man. It may not happen but there's no law against it here.

We are not dying by the hundreds in unsafe, unhealthy, American-financed mines. We are not forbidden to live with our wives for long periods of time so that the mines may be manned around the clock.

Coloureds — mixed blacks with fair skin, Asians and the like — are not issued passes which state, in effect, that they are inferior to whites, but superior to blacks. Such attitudes may exist in some camps, but there are no such laws here.

We have not banned the children's classic "Black Beauty" because of its title. However, some contemporary American blacks are wondering if Snow White was originally a horse.

Knowing that these conditions exist for any people in our small world makes our freedoms tenuous, to say the least. Knowing that conditions of extreme poverty exist and that for South African blacks — dictated by law — it will get no better makes our comfort less comfortable.

Knowing that blacks in South Africa pay a poll tax and additional income tax while their salaries are the lowest — dictated by law — makes our gains questionable.

Knowing that our money (taxpayer and consumer) is invested in such a country makes concerned individuals more concerned about where and how they spend their money. It has long been demonstrated that there is no morality that the "powers" will honor (case in point, Vietnam). It is clearly money and not moral indignation that demands an "ear." Hence, where one spends one's money must become a moral decision.

It appears that one must abstain from purchasing a specific camera or automobile (or an array of other items) that is being manufactured in South Africa. Next, one must let this American company know why he is refusing to purchase its merchandise — that it is a moral, economic judgment against South Africa's apartheid policies. With enough such "moral-economic" decisions, these companies will either pull out of South Africa or exert sufficient pressure on the South African government to bring about long overdue changes for the benefit of human dignity.

South Africa is not that far from home.

Hats Are Seen For Enchanted Evenings

The Millinery Institute of America for fall and winter sees hats for enchanted evenings. The return of the evening hat, the Institute figures, goes along with the "lady-like femininity" of fashions in the season ahead. The fur, velvet and felt hats embellished with touches of sparkle, wisps of veiling and feathers may or may not catch on again. It boils down to: Will women prefer hats to ornate hair-dos for after-dark.

Wedding trip to Lake Tahoe

Clay Roni Marries Janet Marie Wilson

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Belvedere was the setting for the wedding of Janet Marie Wilson and Clay Roni of Tiburon.

Janet is the daughter of Mrs. Margaret Johnston Wilson of Belvedere and Robert Arthur Wilson of Santa Fe, N.M. Mrs. Reynold Acevedo of San Anselmo, the bride's sister, was matron of honor.

John (Pat) Brunslik of Tiburon was best man and ushers were Mike Roni of Tiburon, the bridegroom's brother-in-law, Morgan Buchanan of Concord, Ray Acevedo of San Anselmo, Roger Wilson, the bride's brother, and John Welisch of Belvedere.

Following a reception at the home of Janet's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Jack C. Welisch in Belvedere, the couple went on a wedding trip to Lake Tahoe. They will live in San Rafael.

The bride was graduated from Redwood High School and attended Santa Rosa Junior College. She is employed at the Tiburon Convalescent Hospital.

The bridegroom is the son of Ron Roni of Tiburon and is also the brother of Mrs. Morgan Buchanan of Concord. He was graduated from Redwood High School and will be a senior at Dominican College.

Winds Of Change In The Women's Colleges

NOTRE DAME, Ind. (UPI)— Dr. Edward Henry, new president of Saint Mary's College here, says the role and nature of women's colleges is changing and will continue to change. They're no longer exclusively women's campuses, for one.

"Rather they recognize that women in the formative period of their lives should be able to control the major thrust of their own education and aim it at the particular needs they have in developing a sense of their own sexual identity and outlook...," Henry added.

Career Counselor To Lead Another Workshop Series

Career counselor Mel Krantzler will lead a career workshop for the Family Service Agency of Marin at the agency office in San Rafael beginning Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

The series is the fourth in a set of eight-session workshops that Krantzler has led, and, as the others, is limited to seven persons.

The workshops are open to men and women, married or divorced, however, since the first workshop in January only one man has participated and the majority have been divorced women, according to Krantzler.

Purposes of the workshop, according to Krantzler, are to help the participants know themselves, their potential and capacity for change.

"So many women are struggling to find their own identity. After years of being thrust into traditional roles they are emerging and asking themselves, 'Who am I really?' and 'What resources have I?'", Krantzler said.

"Work assumes a kind of focus, and with it an identity problem can be eliminated. Work is not actually so much a solution as it is a means of enabling the person to struggle for his own identity.

"Work has an objective way of showing a person he is valuable and worthwhile to society, others need and want him and he receives remuneration,which is a symbol of worth."

Krantzler said that past courses have shown group career counseling to be more successful than individual because of the group peer pressure.

After analyzing the participants through tests and interviews, each one receives an assignment, usually to go on an interview for a job or apply for a course.

Members of the group often have a difficult time following through on the interviews and bolster one another, Krantzler said.

"At the next session someone always asks, 'Did you go? What happened?' and we find out from there how they dealt with this devastating challenge. If they didn't go we work through the why," he explained.

The self concept of women is rapidly changing, Krantzler said, pointing out answers participants in the workshops have given on a completion form he gives them at the beginning of each workshop. Most revealing of the 52 incomplete questions participants are asked to finish are, "Modern women. . ." and "Failure. . ."

Typical of the answers of the modern women question is, "Modern women are in the process of finding out their own values," Krantzler said, indicating women believe their roles are in a state of transition.

Those who see failure as a learning experience are most easily guided toward solutions, he said.

"Living experiences help, but professional help is what is needed to reinforce motiviation," he said.

Underwater Lights Needed At Night

If a swimming pool is to be used at night it should have underwater lighting that will light the bottom and entire volume of the pool with no blind spots or equally effective overhead lighting.

Waterproofing of circuits should be checked by a competent electrician at the beginning of each summer season, according to the California Medical Association.

The making of stained glass windows is an ancient craft, but one that is still very much alive. And one of the firms best known in America for its church and residential windows, both traditional and contemporary, makes its home base in San Rafael. It's Cummings Studios, headed by dedicated and energetic young Bill Cummings. And Marin Magazine editor Don Keown writes about Cummings, his studio, his work and the cratt he practices in tomorrow's issue of the I-J weekend supplement.

It's a political year, with political figures very much in the news. But not all of the more formidable men and women in political life are running for public office this election year. One such is Paul Haerle of Marin County. His name is on no ballot. But he is playing an important role in Republican Party activities, and he seems certain to play an even more vital part in the GOP's future. I-J political writer Paul Peterzell has done a "Marin Profile" piece on Paul Haerle, a man-behind-the-scenes.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Just Be Glad That The Wife's Pickiness Confined To Your Back

DEAR HELEN:

I'm a newly married man and don't know everything about women yet, which is a top-flight understatement.

All my life I got along with the blackheads on my back. No problem. But now, every time we go out in the yard to sunbathe, my beloved bride attacks my back with her fingernails — and they're sharp!

I read in "The Naked Ape" or somewhere about the "grooming" that goes on between male and female animals. Is this blackhead-squeezing a throwback to the apes who spend hours picking the lice out of their mates' hair?

Will she ever get over it? — PINCHED

DEAR PINCHED:

Whether it's grooming rites passed down from our animal ancestors, the feminine urge to perfect her mate, or just the challenge of the blackhead — most wives can't resist pummeling and prodding a mate's slightly blemished back. Resign yourself, friend!

. . .And be glad your wife's pickiness is confined to blackheads. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Not all seniors resent remarks about their age, as did a recent writer to HHU. In the first place, one must have a sense of humor. Second, he should be thankful for reaching retirement years. I think it is a privilege to grow old.

I feel fortunate to have reached age 75 and, while I can pass for 60, I never hedge about my years.

Ten years ago I retired, but couldn't stand it, so went back to work. I arise at 5 a.m., put in 35 hours a week, and never felt better. In my spare time, I'm writing a book which has been tentatively accepted for publication.

I have a little trouble going up and down stairs and I don't expect to skip rope or jump hurdles, but I have the self-confidence I lacked in my youth. I now know I have special talents, I can pay my way and more, I give help when it's needed, and I get along great with younger people (who don't put me down).

I am thankful for Medicare, Social Security, and for not being young anymore. Maturity is such a comfort. Everyone should live to grow old — say around 95. — B.R.

DEAR B.:

And may your next 20 years be the best yet! — H.

DEAR HELEN:

One of my pet peeves is the person who will go in on a group gift to someone and then conveniently forget to pay her share. She gets her name signed on the card, gets the "thank you," etc., but the rest of us are stuck.

Many times the one who volunteers to buy the gift ends up paying for half of it because she's usually the good-natured patsy who doesn't have the nerve or is too embarrassed to dun the culprits.

I used to think it was my good taste that made me the chosen one (the buyer), but I've decided nobody else wants to get left — HOLDING THE BAG

DEAR HTB:

Get tough. Remind those forgetful "contributors" until they cough up. If more people were businesslike in personal dealings, there would be a lot fewer moochers in the world. — H.

The Traditional Chore Continuing

NEW YORK (UPI) The Traditional responsibility of the housewife for family food shopping hasn't changed much, despite the fact that so many thousands of wives are working. The working woman either does not or cannot delegate this job, says Leo Bogart, executive vice president and general manager of the Bureau of Advertising. He based his statement on a bureau study of "The Working Woman."

An Eye On Solution To Social Woes

By CAROLE MARTIN

NEW YORK (AP) — The first woman director of the New York Stock Exchange is an economist with a keen interest in directing the nation's resources toward the solution of social problems.

Dr. Juanita M. Kreps, professor of economics at Duke University, was one of 10 new directors elected Wednesday to represent the public interest on an expanded board which will set policy for the world's largest securities exchange.

In her professional work, she has devoted particular interest to consumer issues, the status of working women and disadvantaged groups and the questions of family finance.

"All these areas are related directly or indirectly to the functioning of the New York Stock Exchange," she said in a recent interview. "The Market affects not only the 32.5 million people who own stock directly but also more than 100 million who are indirect owners through pension funds, life insurance policies and other forms of managed savings."

BUT DR. Kreps said that there are certain groups who do not or have not shared in the country's economic growth — the aged, for example.

A vice president of the National Council on the Aging, Dr. Kreps has written extensively on the problems of the older poor and retired persons.

The daughter of a coal mine operator, Dr. Kreps received her master's and doctoral degrees from Duke after graduating from Berea College in eastern Kentucky, not far from Harlan County where she was born.

Dr. Kreps met her husband, Dr. Clifton H. Kreps Jr., now professor of banking at the University of North Carolina, while both were in graduate school.

Nonslip Surfaces

Paved surfaces around a swimming pool should be nonslip and adequately drained away from the pool.

The Return Of Classicism To Fall Clothes For Men

By WALTER LOGAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—If you attend a men's fashion show these days the first thing the commentator announces is that "this is the year of the sweater." Then he goes on about the "layered look" which merely means you wear a sweater under your suit or sports jacket.

It is part of the current return to classicism in men's clothing, the nostalgia for things of the 1920s and 1930s and may even have been triggered by the Broadway musical "No, No, Nanette" in which young men wearing bright sleeveless sweaters tap dance with Ruby Keeler.

These are only a part of the sweater scene. Cardigans of all kind and description are in favor. Big beefy turtlenecks are more popular than they were a few years ago when Lord Snowdon, husband of Britain's Princess Margaret, started wearing them to formal parties.

The wool sweater is the catalyst of today's coordinated look—in the layering of sleeveless styles over shirts and turtlenecks, in the partnership of sweater sets; in the jacket-sweater or pullover as the most important top of the sports outfit.

AND ALMOST anything goes — ribby and slim, big and bulky, or in between weights and knits.

Sleeveless pullovers are the leading ingredient of the layered theme, often ribbed high at the waist for a smooth fit and with a low U the favored neckline. Puritan layers one of these U-necks in flat, heathered wool cables over a floral shirt. Jeff coordinates a ribbed style with a washable lambs woo shirt.

The newest variation is the cap sleeve, as done by Forum in rib contrast. Sweater-shirts with a variety of color and placket treatment are very much in the new, easier way of dressing. And traditional cardigans in heavier gauges and with contrasting rib trim contribute to the layering.

Active sports contribute mightily to the sweater scene and there is a new emphasis on classic golf cardigans and tennis sweaters. Bicycle sweaters and more wool ski sweaters in clearer, more elegant jacquards with such classic designs as reindeer knitted in. There are a lot of uuede touches—including elbow and shoulder patches and as trim on collars, pockets and as buttons.

Big, bulky wool sweaters are seen in rich handknit looks such as jumbo cables and ribs and fisherknits, an example of which is Pendleton's V-cardigan closed with bone buttons, or Jantzen's turtle pullover in a creamy natural color. Lord Jeff's outstanding wool crochet group includes styles in houndstooth and giant diamond patterns.

ON THE OTHER end of the scale are the newest lightweights in lacy pointelle stitches as delicate as a lady's handkerchief. Himalaya has these in long sleeved as well as sleeveless pullovers.

Perhaps the single most popular pattern of fall is the plaid. They vary from the boldly defined to soft and misty effects in deeply brushed mohairs.

Robert Bruce has handsome brushed mohair plaids in both crew pullovers and cardigans. Lion Knitting Mills interprets the plaid story in clearcut variations such as the Tartan red Swis jacquard on a V-neck sleeveless pullover.

But there are argyles, checks, stripes, blockbuster squares, Fair Isles, stars, snowflake designs for ski, and some embroidered motifs. There are all sorts of mixtures —jacquards combined with cables. Alps uses such imaginative figuratives as mountain goats in the jacquard pattern of a crew-neck wool ski pullover.

The turtleneck is a permanent classic, both in its basic style as well as in its convertible variations. There are every size ribs from skinny fine ones with an accordion stretch to the needle out types with a wider, flatter look to the burly tracks.

An Unusual Thought: Don't Regard Thinking As Hard Work

Perhaps your favorite way to relax is to curl up in a hammock and go to sleep. I won't knock your method, but my own vote would go to changing from one activity to another. For example, stop thinking about the United Nations or the price of gold and do your thinking about the kings and queens of the pasteboard world. Don't regard thinking as hard work.

A LOW HEART

West opened the deuce of hearts, and East won with the ace. Naturally, he saw that a shift was necessary.

Before we look at East's thoughtful return, let's see what would probably happen in the average game.

East might return a club, getting absolutely nowhere. South would win and would take the diamond finesse. This would lose, but South would win the rest, making the contract and two overtricks.

THE BEST RETURN

A slightly more thoughtful East might return a low spade. This is, at least, the right suit. South plays low, and West wins with the queen. Now, however, West must shift to a new suit. South has time to go after the diamonds, and makes ten tricks.

THE RIGHT CARD

East must lead the right card as well as the right suit. In this case, East returned the ten of spades at the second trick.

What could South do? He finessed with the jack, losing to the queen. West, alert to what was going on, returned the king of spades. This forced out the ace and picked up dummy's nine at the same time.

Now the defenders were sure to get three spade tricks. These, together with the ace of hearts and the king of diamonds, were enough to defeat the contract.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one heart, and the next player passes. You hold:

♥ Q J 3
♦ 9 8 3
♣ K Q 5 2.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs.

With 13 points in high cards you will eventually make sure of reaching game, but you have an awkward first response. You cannot jump to three hearts with only three-card trump support, and you cannot jump to two no-trump with the diamonds wide open. You must bid your suit, such as it is, and await developments.

Forged-Prescription Innocent Plea Lodged

A 24-year-old San Francisco woman has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a felony count of trying to use a forged prescription for drugs at Payless Drug Store, 866 Fourth Street, San Rafael.

June Rose Robinson, who also uses the surname Caid, is to reappear in court Wednesday so that a preliminary hearing date can be scheduled.

Correct Birth Date

In the birth announcement of a son to Todd Franklin of Novato, the Independent-Journal erred Wednesday in listing the birth as July 2 when it should have been July 3 and Mrs. Franklin's maiden name should have been Nancy Ramage and not Nancy Gonyeau.

Collegians In Yugoslavia With Bolshoi

The Sonoma State College dance workshop arrived in Ljubljana, Yugoslavia today, tired but excited by the well-received performance in Celje, Yugoslavia.

The dancers will perform today and tomorrow at the Ballet Biennal, which also will feature the Bolshoi Ballet, London Opera Ballet and New York City Ballet. They are the first non-professional group ever to appear at the renowned festival.

Dr. William O. Cord, chairman of the college's division of humanities and the tour coordinator, cabled the college yesterday that the dancers "scored a tremendous success" in Celje. He said the group played to a capacity audience and were honored with many curtain calls and flowers.

Cord said the citizens of the city of 80,000 honored the dancers with a dinner after the performance. He said arrangements for lights, music and sets — which had worried the troupe — had been "wonderful."

Cord said the long trip had been very difficult and tiring for the 17 students and five faculty members. He said they had been interviewed and were making arrangements to appear on Yugoslavian television.

Some members of the group will begin the return trip home on Sunday, but many will stay behind to attend other festival events and to tour Europe.

Nude Poster Sales Halted

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A Judge has stopped all sales and display of a poster that shows two apparently nude and entwined ballet stars.

Superior Court Judge Ira A. Brown Jr. issued the temporary restraining order Thursday after an hour-long court hearing during which he looked at both the poster and the original photograph of San Francisco Ballet dancers Sara Maule and Geoffrey Thomas.

The judge said there were "significant changes" made from the photograph to the poster. The picture shows the couple dressed; the poster, apparently undressed.

Named in the restraining order were Laurence Bartone, a San Francisco photographer, Synergistic Systems Inc., a poster manufacturer and distributor and two local poster companies.

FAMILY

"101 Dalmations" — Clever takeoff on the British detective yarns with dogs playing the important parts. Fifteen puppies are dognapped and the hunt and chase is suspenseful. A fresh semi-sophisticated approach to feature length cartoons.

"Swiss Family Robinson" — The story of a Swiss family marooned by shipwreck on a tropical desert island is told with a wealth of details. A remarkable tree house is built and a unique fortress from which to repel pirate attacks add to family solidarity.

"What's Up, Doc?" — Set in San Francisco, treated with a sophisticated touch, this fast moving slapstick, nutty comedy revolves around a mixup with four identical suitcases.

ADULTS AND TEENS

"Fuzz" — A satire on the police, the bumbling crime detection antics of a mythical 87th Precinct in Boston. A harsh hard rock scgre befits the callous humor and violent action and geared to the lowest common denominator of taste. (Motion Picture Daily).

"Nicholas and Alexandra" — The tragic, intimate story of Tsar Nicholas and his family and the period of Russian history from 1904 to 1918. This fascinating classic drama has an excellent cast, is full of color and pageantry but is long with a violent ending.

"Sam Wiskey" — The secret replacement of gold bullion stolen from a U.S. Mint, just after the Civil War makes for a suspenseful story. It is a kind of "Topkapi" in reverse.

"Sometimes a Great Notion" — A tense, dramatic adventure about the dangerous logging operation in the timber wilderness of Oregon. A family of independent loggers defy the union when they call a strike.

BORDERLINE

(Most sources say Adults Only)

"Alex In Wonderland" — A Hollywood producer has one good film but can't find material for another so fantasizes absurd plots. It is funny but not a comedy, profoundly sad but not a tragedy. Some nudity and cursing.

"Cabaret" — Decadently manic mood of pre-Nazi Germany is captured in this adaptation of the racy Broadway msuical. A kooky American girl delights in shocking people with her behavior as a cabaret singer and in her private life. Sophisticated and bawdy with sex and foul language.

"Fillmore" — Documentary of the last rock concert at San Francisco Fillmore West with commentary by owner Bill Graham. Will appeal to those who enjoy loud electric rock. Excessive cursing gives it the mature rating.

"Play It Again, Sam" — In this sex comedy Woody Allen is a dedicated movie buff and as a writer lives in a fantasy world where he gets advice from his favorite actor, Humphrey Bogart, on how to solve his sex problems

"Summer of '42" — Three 15-year-old boys wander through an island beach summer obsessed with sex and its mysteries.

"War Between Men and Women" — James Thurber's drawings and philosophy live on in this follow-up of the television series.

ADULTS ONLY

"Fritz, The Cat" — A tasteless and vulgar X-rated full length cartoon about a cat who by fade-out has used up 8 of his 9 lives investigating the drug scene, radical politics and experimenting with sex. A potpourri of soul, rock and pop music provides the audio backdrop.

"Gimme Shelter" — Story of the Altamont Concert of the Rolling Stones where a member of the audience is murdered by Hell's Angels who were there to police the concert. Nudity, foul language, sex and drugs.

"The Godfather" — Gripping epic gangster film filled with excessive violence. The head of Mafia family leads two lives, as a kindly head of a family and then as leader of a mob whose business is killing.

"The Graduate" — A sophisticated modern satire about a young college graduate who returns to his wealthy parents' home to a loneliness in their materialistic world. A torrid love affair with a married woman ends with his falling in love with her daughter.

"The Hospital" — An aging doctor who postpones his suicide in order to investigate the mysterious deaths of two interns and a nurse. Scathing episodes are sometimes humorously presented. Strong language, sex, excellent cast and acting.

"Klute" — A psychological murder mystery with a sordid background, the brutally realistic picture of the life of a call girl. Strong language, sex and nudity.

"Play Misty For Me" — A terrifying suspense thriller about a radio disc jockey and an insane fan who pursues him. Many bloody deaths and some sex scenes.

"Sunday Bloody Sunday" — An English film on an off beat subject. A divorcee and a doctor are both in love with the same young man.

"Who Is Harry Kellerman" — An aging top folk songwriter is persecuted by an unknown Harry Kellerman who causes his eventual isolation from high stepping New York Life. Story is sprinkled with his hallucination and flashbacks making it difficult to tell the real from the imaginary. Nudity and cursing.

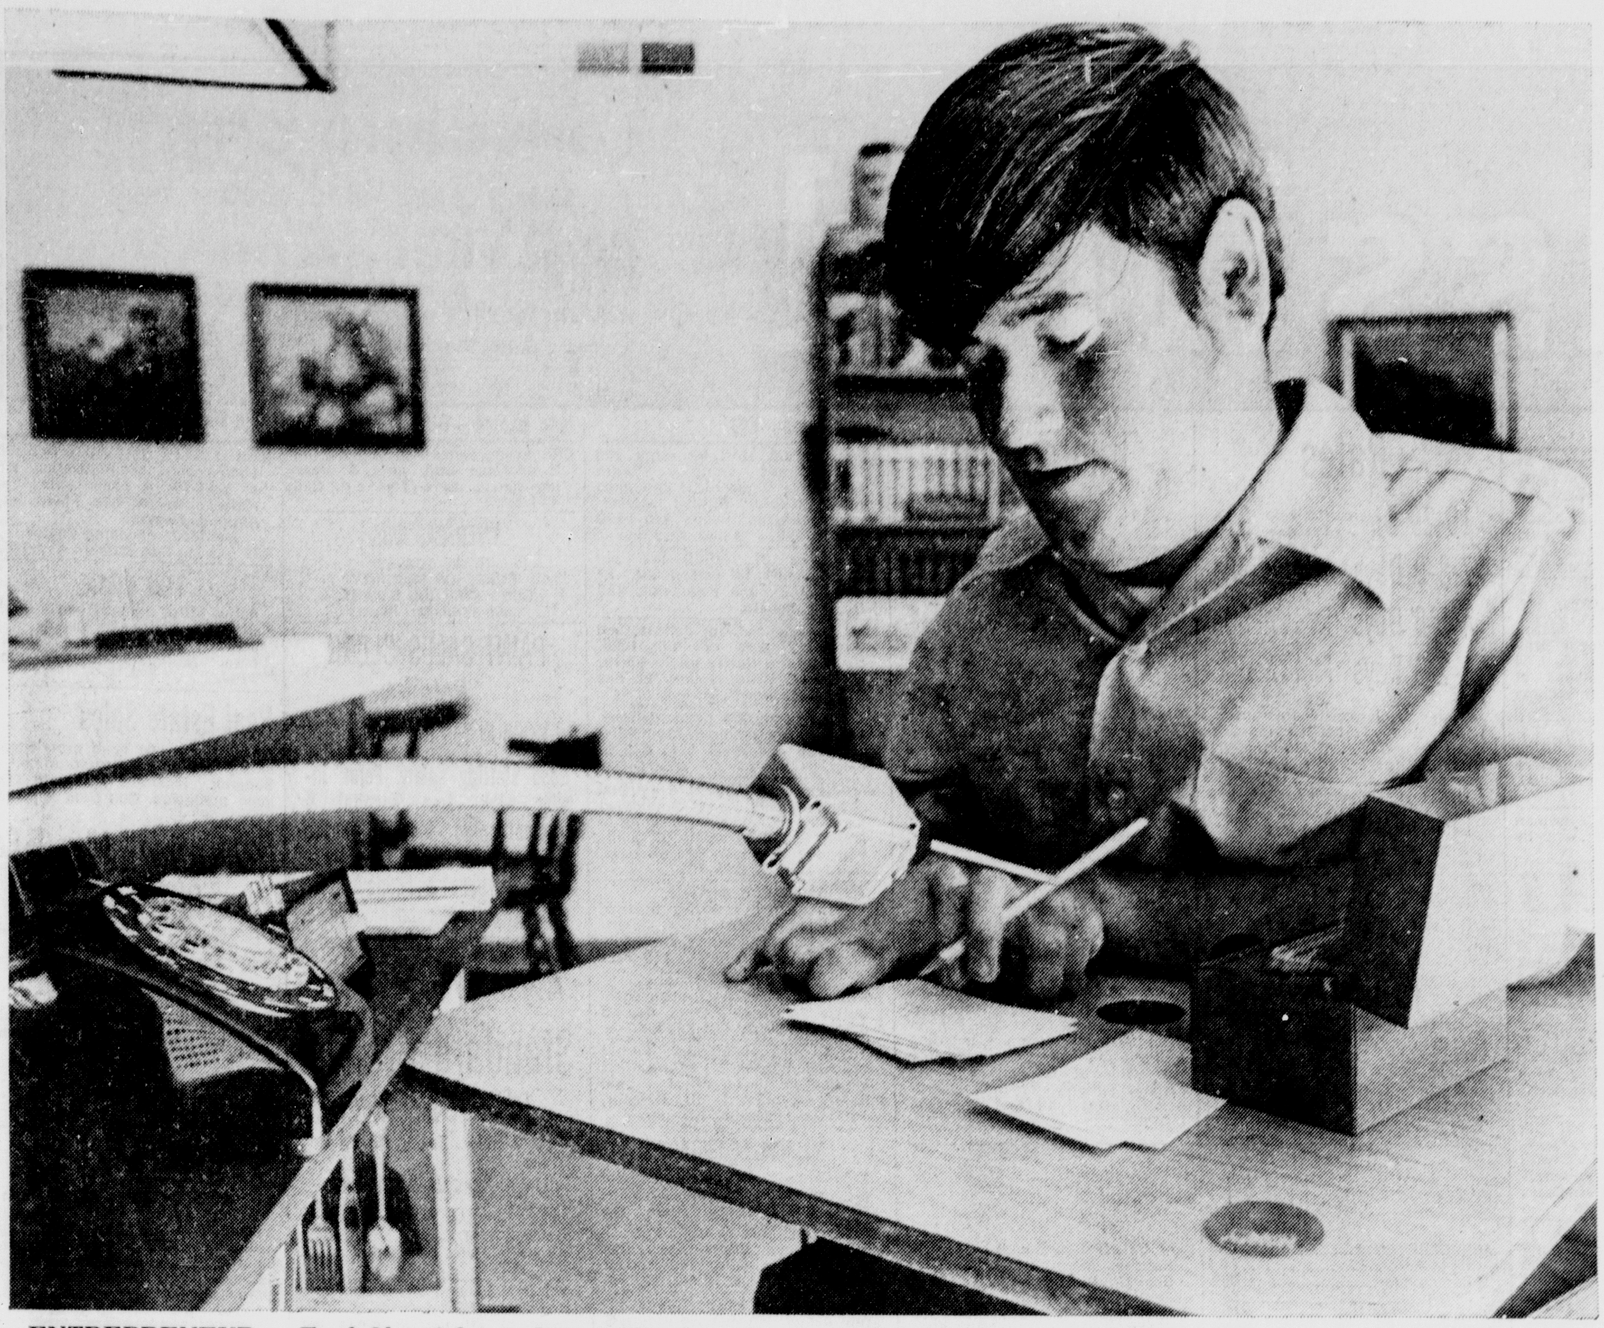
THIRD SECTION SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1972 23



ENTREPRENEUR — Fred Okey takes orders on the phone in his Terra Linda home. Though he can just wiggle a few fingers and move only his head as a result of childhood polio, he doesn't consider himself handicapped. The gadget on the gooseneck is an essential tool, a special switch for his telephone, enabling him to reach an operator to place his business calls.

By PATRICK CORMAN

Fred Okey of Marinwood wants to be a millionaire before he turns 30.

Okey sells home cleaning products and toiletries over the phone. He's convincing and he's smooth. For about eight hours work a week, he takes in nearly $200. The business is seven month old. Every day brings in new customers and more orders for shampoo, after-shave lotion, and dish soap.

Making a million — every salesmen's dream — may be a little tougher for Okey to achieve. Twenty years ago he was stricken with polio. Almost completely paralyzed, he can move only his head and a few fingers. There's an iron lung in his bedroom.

Polio may have robbed him of mobility, but it didn't touch his drive.

"I got into business because I was tired of bumming money from my parents every time I wanted to go somewhere," says the 22-year-old graduate of Terra Linda High School.

Eighteen months as a business major at College of Marin left him disastisfied with academic life. With brother Charles, 20, he put up $3,000 in October 1971, to buy a franchise from a San Jose manufacturer of home care and toilet products. He was in business by January.

For the first few weeks, Okey canvassed Terra Linda and other communities in his $750 electric wheelchair. Accompanied by a friend, John Pulsipher, he passed out samples of shampoo and detergent. Now he does it by phone, making 20 calls a day to some 100 regular customers.

His conversations with clients are laced with smooth, salesman patter. "How did you like that lemon laundry soap I sent you," he asked a housewife, shifting gears during a converstaion originally about a new room deoderizer.

He calls from a special phone without a dial that lets him reach the operator by activitating a switch. Fred received it several years ago from the Terra Linda High School Interact Club, a student service organization spousored by the Rotary Club. And Ma Bell seems to have befriended him, for he says he can't get the phone company to bill him for the service.

Okey lives with his parents, three brothers, and two sisters in a one-story home in Mount Marin. The dining room doubles as his office. A concrete ramp leads to a patio from which he can see riders galloping across the brown Marin hills.

"I've never felt unlike a normal person," says the young entrepreneur. "Even as a kid I was never left out of things. I always had my own opinion and managed to get my two cents in."

His opinion about long hair for instance, is a continuing source of friction between him and his father, Fred W. Okey, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel now employed at the Oakland army base. "The military did that to him," he says.

Business isn't the only interest in young Okey's life. He likes folk and rock music, he's a fisherman — a member of the Marin Rod and Gun Club, and tries to make most Giants and 49ers games.

But he really does want to be a millionaire before age 30. Money means freedom.

"I want to be completely independent. I want to be able to afford to pay for whatever I need. I want a mansion with an attendant. I want a couple of trucks so I could roll right in and out. You name it, I want it." Fred Okey has eight years before he's 30 years old. If he doesn't make his million, it won't be for lack of trying.

Conservation Board Vetoes Marsh Filling

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Bay Area Conservation and Development Commissioners voted 18-0 yesterday against filling a marsh next to Goodman Lumber Co. in the Alto area of Mill Valley.

The vote upheld a staff report which said no water-oriented use was planned for the land, that the marsh was tidal and legally should be preserved, that it fell within the 100-foot "shoreline band" over which the BCDC has jurisdiction and that the applicants sought to fill and make substantial changes in the land's use, without specifying the use.

Reed Hunter, spokesman for the applicants, argued unsuccessfully that the marsh is landlocked except for a culvert that permits tidal flow. He charged that the staff ignored the economic "realities" of flooding each winter, smell, rodents and snakes emerging from the marsh each summer, with bad effects on the neighboring lumber yard and Hi Ho Motel.

Applicants were Abe Blumenfeld, David G. Cohn, Edward Goodman and Richard Harris. They applied to fill about three acres of the five-acre marshland, using one acre for lumberyard parking and the rest for unspecified development when tenants are found.

Director Robert St. Clair, San Mateo County supervisor, moved for the denial. He charged that the applicant's argument that the marsh was "an ugly mudflat" was "contrary to the fiber that's woven this group together."

"If the commission says the public should have the benefits of the property" as an undeveloped marsh, "the public should have to assume the burden" of its ownership, Hunter retorted. He said the owners had paid taxes on it as commercial zoned property for years.

Alternate Director Peter R. Arrigoni, Marin County supervisor, brought out by questions to the staff that the commission never had granted a filling permit for an unspecified land use.

The Bay Conservation and Development Commission Also:

SAN QUENTIN — Voted unanimously to permit developer Richard A. Malott to construct three apartment buildings with 32 units in San Quentin Village. The project lies in the 100-foot shoreline band at Mackenzie and Main streets, and Malott was required to provide adequate public access to the shoreline.

STRAWBERRY — Decided a public hearing must be held July 20 on the Marin Land Development Co. application to resume filling work and construction of apartments on pilings on the east side of Strawberry Peninsula next to the so-called "Eichler fill." The work began in 1968 under a BCDC permit but was not completed within the time limit. The commission's rules have changed in the meantime.

AIRPORTS — Reacting to the Association of Bay Area Governments' Regional Airport Committee report on the future of Bay Area airports, including Hamilton Air Force Base, declared that bay fill for airports is a legitimate use if the applicant can prove necessity; requested more precise and realistic population and air traffic projections; asked that alternatives including the use of satellite airports such as Hamilton, or high speed surface transport, be studied in preference to extending metropolitan airports further into the bay; asked for consideration of noise and air pollution factors and enlarge ment of Oakland airport by stages.

Marinite Seeking New Sentencing Judge

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A Marin County resident who has pleaded guilty to conspiring to smuggle marijuana into this country, has filed a motion to change judges for sentencing.

John Robert Franklin, 34, of Corte Madera, filed the motion requesting that he not be sentenced by visiting Judge William C. Frey of Phoenix, but by Judge Stanley A. Weigel who first heard the case of Franklin and two other men.

Franklin filed the motion Monday, but date for hearing on it has not been set.

The two other men connected with the smuggling case have been sentenced. Ray Ramirez, 44, of Palm Springs, was sentenced to seven years in prison and fined $15,000, and George Ballam, 44, of Las Vegas, the pilot who flew the marijuana from Mexico to an Arizona ranch, was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $5,000.

San Rafael Faces Inclusion In Proposed Park District

The staff of the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission has recommended tax-rich San Rafael be included in the boundaries of the proposed countywide park and open space district.

County Administrator John F. Barrows, who doubles as executive officer to the commission, said that while he opposes the district in principle it should cover the entire county — and its 11 cities — if formed.

The commission, which must approve all special districts, will consider creation of the park district Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the county Civic Center.

The San Rafael City Council requested last month that the city be excluded from the park district's boundaries since it would provide about 24 per cent of the district's funds but would have no direct control over their use.

As an alternative, the city council has voted to put a $2 million bond measure before city voters as a means of financing local open space acquisition.

Barrows said the San Rafael request "does not appear justified" since open space is a countywide benefit and must be handled at that level.

"Total equity among taxpayers and service recipients has never been possible," he said.

Barrows explained in his recommendation to the commission that he opposes the special park district since it would duplicate the land acquisition powers of existing county agencies.

Further, the formation election would cost taxpayers about $24,000 and the district would be limited to a tax rate of 10 cents per $100 assessed valuation. The county would have no such limitation.

He claimed the only advantage of a park district is that under state law it has two borrowing powers not available to existing county government.

Those include state legislation permitting the district to borrow up to $200,000 and repay over five years and to borrow up to two years of anticipated tax income (about $1.4 million) repayable over 10 years. Neither would require voter approval.

While such borrowing powers "may be attractive to elected officials as a method to avoid bond elections it would appear that the county government has a more realistic method to achieve the same goal," he said. "Increase the budget appropriation for open space as necessary to finance desired land acquisitions and thereby avoid any interest on borrowed funds.

"Put another way," he continued, "the regional park district, because of its tax rate limit, has been forced to obtain legislative approval of these two unusual types of borrowing authority without voter approval."

Ross School Budget Passes

The Ross School District board last night adopted a proposedbudget of $622,-581 for 1972-73.

The budget, up from this year's $581,-189 program, would add 10 cents to the district's tax rate of $3.03 per $100 of assessed valuation, according to Thomas A. Anderson, district superintendent.

He said that the budget, which includes $53,000 in reserve funds, will come up for adoption at a public hearing set for Aug. 7.

He said that new officers elected at last night's meeting include Van Norden Logan, president; Dr. Gwynn Thomson, trustee representative; Sally Ann Rakow, legislative representative and Elizabeth Way, board clerk.

The board also passed a resolution of appreciation for Rena Safford, a kindergarden teacher who retired recently after 23 years in the district.

Airline Travel Shows Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Passenger traffic on U.S. scheduled airlines, both domestic and international, during the first quarter of 1972 increased 14.8 per cent from the first quarter of 1971.

So says the Air Trnasport Assn.

Twenty-three U.S. airlines, including truck, international, local service and helicopter air carriers, flew 33.8 billion revenue passenger miles in scheduled domestic and international service. This was up 29.5 billion flown the first three months of 1971.

The passenger load factor for the period was 48.7 per cent, compared with 44.3 per cent for the period last year.

Sterilization

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — A total of 14,038 persons have been sterilized in Malaysia to date, the government reports, of these, only 1,046 were men. The government has rejected proposals to reward those who undergo voluntary sterilization.

Indirect Override On Education Funds

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate has voted to restore $1.1 million in state college education opportunity funds vetoed from the state budget by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The indirect override of the veto was approved on a 28-10 vote Thursday that sent a bill by Sen. Milton Marks, R-San Francisco, to the Assembly. Nine Republicans joined 19 Democrats in voting "aye."

The Legislature authorized $3.3 million in the budget for educational opportunity program grants for economically disadvantaged students, mostly minorities. Reagan had proposed no funds.

This contract is part of a research project for the study of the corrosion rates of marine underwater steel piles and corrosion characteristics of the soil and water environment over a period of several years at ten pier locations on the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge in San Francisco Bay and for the study of possible methods which could be used to arrest or impede the corrosion of the steel piles. Pressure Increasing For Safer Glass Use

By ROBERT P. HEY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — First-grader Davey romps gleefully up the steps of his apartment building. He pushes his right hand against the lobby's glass door — the glass shatters. His hand is injured. The door was made of weak, easily breakable glass.

Some 250,000 equally needless accidents with glass doors happen every year in the United States. In most states, no law requires that sturdy glass be used in glass doors in residential buildings — whether shower doors, patio doors, storm doors — or apartment entry doors like this one. The glass used is often cheap.

Now there's a major move afoot to require that safe glass be used in all glass doors. That would enhance the safety of all Americans — especially children. More than half these 250,000 accidents occur to Americans under 15.

Representatives of glass manufacturers, labor, safety organizations, and even government are trying to get states to pass a model law to that effect. It would require use of one of several kinds of sturdy glass, or of plastic, in these doors.

These materials would easily withstand the force of a push from Davey. If anybody did break them, they wouldn't shatter in long, jagged splinters like the kind of glass — called annealed — Davey met.

Opposition has been stiffening — stiffer than ever in the legislative year just past. It comes primarily from homebuilders and hardware dealers. For their separate reasons they feel it would cost them money if sturdy glass had to be used in glass doors.

Additionally, the home builders say they don't want anybody telling them how to build their houses.

These two groups oppose the bill in state after state. They've been able to prevent it from becoming law in many of them.

Jeff Kierns says most state and local building codes don't require using safety glass in glass doors in residential buildings —they cover only commercial buildings. Mr. Kierns is executive director of the National Glass Dealers Association and chairman of the Consumer Safety Glazing Committee.

Mrs. Virginia H. Knauer, special assistant to President Nixon for Consumer Affairs, is urging home builders to re-examine their opposition — and to support this safety-glazing legislation to prevent "needless tragedies." In an address June 8 to the Pacific Coast Builders Conference in San Francisco, Mrs. Knauer said the Safety Glazing Committee "represents various organizations and industries, but the home building industry is not among them."

Mrs. Knauer called the model bill the 18 states have approved "a good one," and urged home builders to support it.

"The builder who uses safety glazing can educate the consummer and benefit his business at the same time by advertising the safety glazing features of the homes he builds," he said. "Your advertising can educate the consumer to look for safety glazing as a mark of the quality builder."

Whether this appeal to economic self-interest will help persuade home builders to end their opposition is not known, though some are skeptical.

But if a bill now rumbling somewhat uncertainly through the congressional mill passes — all this may prove academic. It's the Product Safety Bill, awaiting a crucial vote by the full House of Representatives. The bill would set up an independent product-safety commission empowered to establish safety standards for consumer products. Chances for the bill's passage appear fairly good.

It is expected in Washington that such a product-safety commision eventually would establish standards for glass doors — thus would require that one of the sturdier, less dangerous kinds of glass be used in all glass doors.

The bill is based substantially on recommendations made in 1970 by the National Product Safety Commission, which identified 16 hazardous products. Glass doors were one of the 16.

Four materials meet the safety standards that the Consumer Glazing Commission is pushing: tempered glass, laminated glass, glass containing wire, and rigid plastic. Most safety glass now used is of tempered glass.

A principal problem with the use of tempered glass is that it must be made to measure — unlike regular annealed glass it cannot be cut to size in hardware stores. Thus replacing an odd-size tempered glass panel, which did break could require a wait, until it is manufactured to size. Mr. Kierns says research is going on aimed at producing tempered glass that can be cut.

Justice Sees Loss Of Trial By Jury

HOUSTON (UPI) — Legal protections of freedom of the individual are eroding and the United States is in danger of losing its trial-by-jury system of justice to one of inquisitions, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas said Thursday.

"Presumption of innocence and proof beyond a reasonable doubt have been the hallmarks of the accusatorial system as contrasted to the inquisition," Douglas said. "Recent actions require us to reappraise the situation we are in, and to take a closer look at the inquisition to which we seem headed."

Douglas, speaking to the 90th annual convention of the Texas Bar Association, said it now appeared the accusatorial system was being eroded.

The 73-year-old justice, who was appointed to the nation's highest court in 1939 by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, said a most conspicuous example of the undermining of legal safeguards were two cases ruled on this year by the Supreme Court.

"Those cases held that in noncapital cases, the states may convict with less than unanimous jury verdicts," Douglas said. "While the requirement of proof reasonable doubt is protected by the Sixth Amendment, it no longer controls state criminal trials."

He said it was difficult to believe that with a verdict of 9-3 there is no reasonable doubt.

Douglas also said the jury system has its faults but has generally served the nation well.

Church Leader Dies In Istanbul

ISTANBUL (UPI)—Patriarch Athenagoras I, leader of the 126-million-member Orthodox church, died in an Istanbul hospital early today. He was 86.

The tall, white-bearded patriarch played a major role in attempts to end the 900-year-old split between the Orthodox and Roman Catholic churches. He met three times with Pope Paul VI—the first on the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem in 1964 where they exchanged a "kiss of peace" symbolizing the ecumenical movement.

Athenagoras, who was patriarch of North and South America for 18 years and during that time became a U.S. citizen, fell down the stairs at his patriarchate in central Istanbul a week ago and broke his hip.

Jane Fonda Heads For North Vietnam

PARIS (UPI)—Actress Jane Fonda is on her way to North Vietnam. She left Thursday carrying several hundred letters for American prisoners of war from their families.

Miss Fonda said she expects to stop in Moscow before going to Hanoi. She plans to spend 10 days in North Vietnam to observe the effects of U.S. bombing raids.

Monkey's Life Snuffed Out By 'Alligator' Tree

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — "It was sad, but it happens all the time in the jungle," was the matter-of-fact explanation given by officials for the July 4 death of a Rhesus monkey at the Highland Park Zoo here.

Assistant director Chuck Clift said the monkey escaped from the Children's Zoo, but no attempt was made to capture it because "they always come back to their cage at feeding time."

"Unfortunately, this one entered the aquarium where we have a South American exhibit," said Clift. "The monkey apparently thought he was home and leaped for a tree, but got caught in mid-air by a Caiman alligator."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

25 Catastrophic Disasters Hit In The Last 30 Years

To statisticians, catastrophes are accidents in which five or more people die. (It excludes military aviation accidents.) These types of mishaps make headlines, even though the total number is nil compared with ordinary accidents. The one or two persons killed every hour in the United States make the obituary column and that is all. But when added up at the end of the year, this constant dribble usually exceeds 100,000.

ACCORDING to the Statistical Bureau of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., there were 25 catastrophic disasters in the last 30 years in which 100 or more persons lost their lives. The 1947 Texas City, Tex., fire and explosion heads the list with 561 deaths. Next is the nightclub fire in Boston that claimed 492 victims. The hurricane and floods that ravaged Louisiana and Texas in 1957, left 3w5 dead. And 322 lost their lives when two ammunition ships exploded in Port Chicago, Cal. The only accidents involving commercial planes in this over-100 list occurred when scheduled air liners collided; the first over the Grand Canyon and the second over Staten Island, N.Y.

DURING the 30-year period (1941-70), there were 3,900 catastrophic accidents resulting in 39,300 deaths. The latter is nil compared with the annual carnage of 100,000 from all types of accidents. Fires and explosions, which were responsible for one-quarter of all catastrophic accidents, took place mainly in dwellings and apartments.

FIFTY THOUSAND die on our highways every year and most crashes involve about four people. During the last 30 years, only 9,600 were killed in accidents listed in the catastrophic category. Most scheduled airline accidents are catastrophic in nature, even though the total is small. From 1966 to 1970, 1,448 died in this way. During the same period, 250,000 were killed on the highways. Only a small percentage of our population travel by air, possibly because of fear or limited finances. Buses, railroads, and boats are safe, but air travel is safer than the auto, especially when passenger miles are taken into consideration.

CARE WITH CORTISONE

N.E. writes: Why do physicians give cortisone only when it is absolutely necessary?

REPLY

Because these steroid drugs affect many organs of the body that are unrelated to the condition being treated. The question to be decided is whether the side effects are worse than the original disease.

ANEMIC INFANT

Mrs. O. R. writes: Does an RH baby who had to have transfusions get over his anemia? My son is 9 months old and his count is only 60.

REPLY

Yes. There must be other reasons for your infant's anemia, such as neglecting to feed him solid foods.

DON'T GET FAT

Mrs. T. J. writes: How do you keep the stomach flat after a hysterectomy?

REPLY

Strengthen the abdominal muscles through exercise and wear a girdle. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on these exercises.

Mendocino Man Pleads Innocent

A Mendocino County man has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of robbing a San Rafael grocery clerk and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for Tuesday.

Francis James Mayer, 24, of Talmage, was arrested Sunday in Richmond following a chase by San Rafael police.

Officers said a man armed with a .22-caliber revolver entered the Short Stop market at 141 Bellam Boulevard at about 5:40 a.m. and forced the clerk to give him money and two packs of cigarettes.

Police said they found a pistol, a sack containing $81 and a pack of cigarettes beneath the front seat of Mayer's car after the chase.

Baker Assigned To S. Africa Embassy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — James E. Baker, 37, will become the first American diplomat sent on permanent assignment to the U.S. embassy in South Africa.

He will become an economics and commercial officer in the embassy, a State Department spokesman said Thursday. Baker has been serving at the U.S. embassy in Tokyo in a similar capacity.

Hospitalized Truman Still Satisfactory

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)— Former President Harry S Truman is now on a liquid diet at Research Hospital. But doctors say his condition has not changed from "satisfactory" since he was admitted Sunday with an intestinal ailment.

Truman, 88, has been visited by his wife Bess, 87, daily since he was admitted five days ago. Doctors have been taking blood tests and x-rays, trying to diagnose the ailment.

Golf Course Or Gridiron?

By RALPH CHATOIAN

It might look more like a football game than a golf tournament Monday at the Marin Country Club course in Novato. The 49er Goal Rushers of Marin will be putting on their second annual golf tourney and have been assured at least 15 of the active players will be on hand.

In addition to the active players, former star players Abe Woodson and J. D. Smith will join with former great Ernie Nevers in the 18-hole tournament which is open to the public. Shotgun start will be at 1 p.m.

Bruce Gossett will be there to defend his 1971 title. He hits a golf ball with his club almost as good as he can hit a football with his foot. Other 49ers entered include Cas Banaszek, Randy Beisler, Len Rohde, Jim McCann, Frank Nunley, Jim Johnson, Mel Phillips, Larry Schreiber, Vic Washington, Ken Willard, Skip Vanderbundt, Earl Edwards and Marty Huff. Cedrick Hardman, still recovering from knee surgery, will not play but I'm told he will be in charge of the refreshment wagon. (Make it one for the road, Cedrick.)

Doug Cunningham, Woody Peoples, Dick Witcher and Willie Parker are listed as "possibles."

Jim King, the Goal Rusher in charge of the tournament, said he expects about 80 golfers in the tournament, and 150 persons at the dinner following the tourney. Some are playing and eating, others just playing, and others just eating. Although it's too late for dinner reservations, last minute golf entrants can still register at the Marin C.C. pro shop, King said. Cost for golf-only is $17.50.

ODDS AND ENDS:

Joe Decker, former Petaluma High School star whose mother now lives in San Rafael, pitched a seven-hit, 5-0 shutout last night to lead Wichita past Omaha in an American Association game . . . Sharon Walsh of San Rafael was to take on Pat Coleman of Australia in the semi-final round of consolation singles at Wimbledon, England. Sharon won two matches in women's doubles and two in mixed doubles before losing in the third round each time. After Wimbledon, she'll be leaving for Wales next week and the Welsh Open Tennis Tournament . . . Mrs. William Brannan of 21 Idalia Court, San Anselmo, admits to a lack of knowledge on the subject of soccer, but is interested in beginning a youth soccer program for boys 8-14 in San Anselmo patterned after the program that has been such a success in Ross. "Tell all the kids interested in forming a San Anslemo soccer league to call me," said Mrs. Brannan. Okay. I'll tell them.

Mert Lawwill of Tiburon, trying to win back that No. 1 position he had in the 1969 American Motorcycle Association National Championship racing, is one of the entrants in the Yamaha Gold Cup race at the Salem, Oregon, State Fairgrounds, Sunday.

BATTLING WATERS — Skipper Bud Melges of Zenda, Wis., who yesterday captured his third U.S. Soling Class Olympic trials race hosted by the San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere, and his two-man crew, in an earlier race battled to keep control of their ship in the raging Richmond-Berkeley Olympic Circle waters, despite a broken mast. Melges and his crew could not finish that race, but today they could win the trials in the final of seven races. (Robert Fisher photo)

AT WIMBLEDON

Billie Jean Net Titlist

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., today beat Evonne Goolagong of Australia 6-3, 6-3 to regain the Wimbledon Women's Singles Tennis Title she last won in 1968.

Mrs. King needed only 50 minutes to dethrone Miss Goolagong as champion and reverse the semifinal loss she suffered to the Australian last year.

Mrs. King, the bookies' choice at 13 to 8 on despite her second seeding, made a tentative start by serving four double faults in her first two service games. En route she was obliged to save to break points, but with Evonne playing a terrible opening game she broke to 15 in the second to lead 3-0.

The bespectacled American, who wore a white lace dress, appeared to be in trouble in the seventh game when she lost her service after the third bad call against her.

FIRST BALL

At 40-30 she served what looked a perfectly good first ball but the umpire called a fault. Upset, she served a short second, and Evonne hit a backhand down the line to make it deuce. A cross court return on a second service gave Evonne advantage, then Billie Jean netted a forehand volley.

Evonne raced to 40-15 in the next game. She then reached for a backhand she could well have left and dumped the ball in the net, then played a forehand placement when a backhand cross court would have given her the game. Billie Jean made the return and forced a volleying error. A forehand into

Hot Giants Closing In On Atlanta; Montreal Next

MONTREAL (UPI) — Any delegation willing to support a move that the baseball standings only count from July 1 this season will gladly be seated by the San Francisco Giants.

The young warriors of Charlie Fox made it six wins out of their last seven games Thursday night with a 6-4 victory at Philadelphia in 10 innings.

The hot Giants are actually closing ground on slumping Atlanta in the Western Division chase, but there seems little hope of their ever reaching the upper echelons occupied by Cincinnati and Houston.

Tonight they open a three game set with Montreal with Sam McDowell (8-5) set to go against Bill Stoneman (7-5) in a battle between a big guy and a little guy who can both throw hard.

TURNAROUND

Symbolizing the Giants turnaround from their early season futility is muscular reliever Jerry Johnson, whose two flawless innings brought him the victory Thursday and ran his record to 6-5 for the season. Not so long ago it was 1-4.

The Giants finally pulled out the contest in the 10th when Dave Kingman walked and Damasco Blanco singled with two out and then Tito Fuentes tripled them home.

3rd Soling Win In Row By Melges

Despite ranking a lowly eighth on Monday, Buddy Melges of Zenda, Wis. captured his third straight race yesterday and moved into the points lead in the U.S. Soling Class Olympic trials which are being hosted by San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere.

Former leader Lowell North of San Diego was third in the sixth race of the seven-event series and fell to second place in the overall standings.

This sets up an exciting match for today's final race, slated to begin at 12:30 p.m. on the 11-mile S.F. Bay course off Berkeley.

North must finish ahead of Melges with at least one boat in between them to regain the lead. Yesterday's second-place finisher and presently third in points standing, Bruce Goldsmith of Winnetka, Ill., has a slim shot at the title.

Melges led the 33-boat field from start to finish yesterday and finished 1:13 ahead of Goldsmith.

North suffered a severe blow to his title chances with the third-place finish as Goldsmith edged him at the finish for second place.

Marin's Warwick Tompkins turned in another good performance as he grabbed fourth place and moved into sixth place in the points standings.

Yesterday's Results:
1. Buddy Melges, Zenda, Wis.; 2. Bruce Goldsmith, Winnetka, Ill.; 3. Lowell North, San Diego; 4. Warwick Tompkins, Mill Valley; 5. John Dane, New Orleans; 6. Bob Johnstone, Chicago; 7. Dick Stearns, Chicago; 8. John Kolius, Houston; 9. Bob Mosbacher, Houston; 10. Sam Merrick, Washington, D.C.

Series Leaders (after six races):
1. Melges 13; 2. North 17.7; 3. Goldsmith 24.4; 4. Dane 41.1; 5. Earl Elms, San Diego, (dismasted sixth race) 41.4; 6. Tompkins 47; 7. Johnstone 56.7; 8. Stearns 61.7; 9. Merrick 69; 10. Dave Curtis, Marblehead, Mass., (11th in sixth race) 84.

HAMILTON OUT

Jackson Back In A's Lineup

OAKLAND (UPI) — Slump-ridden Reggie Jackson isn't staying benched very long.

After watching restlessly from the bench Thursday night as the New York Yankees bombed the Oakland Athletics 6-2, Jackson will be in centerfield tonight when the Milwaukee Brewers come to town to open a three-game series.

WILLIAMS

A's manager Dick Williams said he talked things over with Reggie and both agreed he should rest at least one game.

"I was just mentally tired," said Jackson who is batticg .241 but hasn't hit a homer since June 24. He still tops the American League in home runs with 15.

'FADED'

"My average has faded like water colors. I wasn't driving in any runs and I wasn't helping the team."

Jackson has had only four hits in his last 46 at bats.

Another thing which prompted Williams to get Jackson back into the lineup was the somewhat shoddy performance of Jackson's replacement, George Hendrick. He struck out with two runners on base to end a budding rally that had produced two runs in the sixth inning.

An inning earlier, Hendrick slipped and fell in centerfield while going back for a Felipe Alou flyball. The ball went for a double scoring two runs.

HAMILTON OUT

While Jackson goes back into the lineup, Williams announced that rookie Dave Hamilton will be taken out of the starting rotation. Hamilton lasted 4 1-3 innings against the Yanks while giving up four runs and five hits. Joe Horlen, who pitched in relief of Hamilton Thursday night, will start Tuesday night against the Boston Red Sox.

Alou, a former Athletic and San Francisco Giant, went 5-for-7 as the Yankees won three from the A's. He had a homer and three doubles.

"But I still don't like to hit in the Bay Area," said Alou. "It's too cold."

RALLY ENDED

Sparky Lyle shut off an Oakland rally in the sixth inning and hurled three more shutout innings Thursday night to record his major league-leading 17th save. Lyle has figured in 19 of New York's 33 victories this season.

"The best thing that ever happened to me was when the Red Sox traded me to the Yankees early this year," said Lyle. He said he felt that Boston manager Eddie Kasko "lost confidence in me last season."

DeMont Record In Swim Meet

I-J Special Report

LOS ANGELES — Marin Aquatic Club swimmer Rick DeMont got in on the record breaking yesterday as eight of ten standards were broken in the first of three days of competition at the Los Angeles Swimming Invitational.

DeMont blazed a final 100 meters of 59.0 in the 400 meter freestyle to overtake Doug Northway of Pima, Ariz., in meet record time of 4:06.05.

Northway finished exactly a full second behind the Marin swimmer in 4:07.05.

Although a specialist in the 1650 meter event which is still to be contested, DeMont also thrashed present world record holder Tom McBreen in the 400 meters. McGreen finished a disappointing fifth.

Another Marin swimmer, Denise Ham, placed 16th in the 200 meter individual medley, 2:37.39.

Two other local swimmers narrowly missed placing. Jo Hislop in the 100-meter freestyle and 200-meter medley events and Paul Cane in the 100 meter breast stroke.

Other meet records set in the men's competition were by:

Charlie Campbell, Pasadena

OPENING TALLY — San Francisco Giants' right fielder Bobby Bonds scored the game's first run during the opening inning at Philadelphia last night on a sacrifice fly by teammate Chris Speier. Philadelphia Phillies' catcher Mike Ryan waited for the late throw from the outfield. The Giants won, 6-4. (UPI Telephoto)

Pros' Sale Approved

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI)— Stockholders of the Memphis Pros, meeting in special session Thursday night, approved the sale of the American Basketball Association team to Charles O. Finley.

Pros officials told the estimated 400 stockholders that of the 74,223 proxy ballots returned last week, 69,225 voted in favor of selling the team to Finley, who owns the Oakland A's and the California Golden Seals hockey team.

There were 4,998 votes against the sale.

Final Three Marin Netters Eliminated

Marin County's final three hopes in the singles of the National Junior Hardcourt Championships were eliminated as action continued yesterday at the Belvedere Tennis Club and the Peninsula Tennis Club in Burlingame.

In the 12-14 Divisions at Belvedere, Diane DeMartini of Greenbrae found herself on the short end of two 6-0 sets as she was eliminated by Lisa Nard of Modesto.

Marin's remaining representatives in the 16-18 age groups at Burlingame found themselves in the same kind of trouble as each was eliminated in two sets.

Bee Kilgore of Tiburon was a 6-2, 6-1 victim of Joy Schwikert in Girls 18 third round play and Henry Jacobsen was eliminated by Gene Mayer. The Tiburon youth, playing in Boys 16, fell 6-3, 6-3.

In play at Burlingame yesterday, second-seed John Whitlinger of Neenah, Wis., was sent to the sidelines by Costa Mesa's

Legal Question Of Ownership

(Last of Series)

MONTREAL — Horace Stoneham unequivocally denied just before this road trip of the Giants started that the ball club was for sale. But even if the 70-year-old president of the club did receive a tempting offer could he sell the 51 per cent of National Exhibition Company stock he controls?

Although he has voting control of the stock, Stoneham doesn't own it outright. He is a co-equal life beneficiary of the 51 per cent with his sister, Mary A. Aufderhar. Horace's mother, Hannah Stoneham, made him and his sister life beneficiaries of the stock under the terms of her will which bequeaths it ultimately to their children.

SOME YEARS ago, according to a lifelong friend of the family, Mrs. Aufderhar received an offer for her interest in the ball club but discovered she, like her brother, didn't own the stock outright.

Third Security Company owns the stock. The voting power of that holding company is vested in a Trust set up by Hannah Stoneham's will. Until his recent death, Edgar P. Feeley, a New York attorney, exercised the Trust's voting power with Horace Stoneham. Charles B. Rupert, Horace's son-in-law, now has replaced Feeley as Stoneham's fellow trustee.

RUPERT'S WIFE, the former Valleda Stoneham, and her brother, Charles H. (Pete) Stoneham, are the ultimate heirs of half of the controlling 51 per cent of stock in National Exhibition Company. Charles S. Feeney, son of Mrs. Aufderhar, is ultimate heir of the other half.

NEC is the legal corporate owner of the Giants. Horace Stoneham has the voting control of 6,313 shares of NEC's 11,751 outstanding shares (formerly with Feeley and now with Rupert). Stoneham doesn't need proxies from other stockholders in his routine re-election each year as president of NEC. But he always receives their unanimous support.

Harry Stevens, the concessionaire, is the only really big stockholder in NEC other than the Stoneham family interest. Stevens owns 1,403 shares (11.9 per cent). Harry Stevens and Horace Stoneham not only have been lifelong friends but close business associate.

STEVENS CALIFORNIA Enterprises, Inc., an affiliate of Harry M. Stevens, Inc., is the exclusive concessionaire at Candlestick Park and also manages the Stadium Club restaurant at Candlestick. Under the Candlestick concessionaire contract, Stevens pays NEC a percentage of its receipts. Last year the percentage amounted to $461,362.

The Stadium Club management contract provides, among other things, that Stevens pay NEC one-half of net profits and NEC reimburse Stevens for any net loss. Last year NEC reimbursed Stevens $16,169 in connection with the Stadium Club.

MARIAN D. CHENEY, widow of the multi-millionaire lumberman Ben Cheney who was a close friend of Stoneham, owns a block of 662 NEC shares. Max Schneider, millionaire New York textile processor and another of Stoneham's close friends, is the next largest NEC stockholder. He owns 385 shares.

Then comes Robert A. Lurie of San Francisco. Bob Lurie owns 89 shares. Shirley Gray, millionaire Chicago manufacturer of electric insulators, owns 50 shares. Garry Schumacher, recently retired as the Giants' long time publicity man, also owns 50 shares left to him by the late Tallant Tubbs.

THE REST OF NEC stock is held by numerous rooters of the Giants, most of them one or two share holders.

As long as Horace Stoneham is running NEC and the Giants there never will be any proxy power fight for control of the club. There can't be because of the 51 per cent NEC stock he controls, plus the proxy support he receives from Stevens, Mrs. Cheney, Schneider and lesser stockholders.

Baltimore Battery Aids Win

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

A weak Baltimore battery with a combined batting average of .086 kept the Orioles two games ahead of Detroit today in the American League East.

Catcher Ellie Hendricks, hitting .111, doubled in the eighth inning against Chicago Thursday night and Mike Cuellar, batting .061, sent him home with a single as Baltimore edged the White Sox, 2-1, for its fifth straight victory.

In other scheduled American League games, Detroit shut out Kansas City, 7-0; New York beat Oakland, 6-2; Milwaukee nipped California, 6-5, and Cleveland beat Texas twice, 4-3 and then 6-5 in 12 innings.

Detroit broke a four-game losing streak as Joe Coleman won his 10th game with a six-hitter against Kansas City.

John Briggs came off the bench to belt a pair of homers as Milwaukee stopped California behind the 6 1-3 innings of scoreless relief pitching by Jim Colborn.

Gaylord Perry won his 13th game in the opener for Cleveland, but had to quell a Texas rally in the ninth after the Rangers scored twice. Chris Chambliss had three hits in each game and Gerry Moses hit his second of the season for Cleve land in the nightcap which the Indians won on a 12th inning single by Alex Johnson and Graig Nettles' double.

Perry's Softballers In Petaluma Victory

Denny Coleman, Tony DeFellipo and Terry Horner provided the key hits and Joe Dunlap the pitching as Perry's Delicatessen opened the Fifth Annual Petaluma Softball Tournament with a 4-2 win over Young America Homes of Santa Rosa.

Suburban Auto enters action tonight in a 9 p.m. game with Concord Disposal and Perry's will return to action tomorrow in a 4 p.m. contest against Los Robles of Sacramento. Paul Carneggie is slated to pitch for Perry's.

49ers Pick Vice President; 2 Arrests in Play Book Row

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

SAN FRANCISCO — Jack White, who has served the San Francisco 49ers as general manager for the past five years, will take on the new title of Vice President for Personnel.

Club president Lou Spadia made the announcement which, in effect, gives White the responsibility for the area of operations formerly conducted by Lynn O. "Pappy" Waldorf as Director of Personnel.

Waldorf, who had been with the 49ers since 1957, recently announced his retirement effective July 1.

White's duties now include operation of the club's personnel department, including scouting and player relations.

"Jack is one of the most experienced and able men in the game in the area of seeking out and evaluating football talent," Spadia said. "We have relied on him for years in this year and have great faith in his judgment."

NEW ORLEANS — The Federal Bureau of Investigation said it arrested a former Los Angeles Rams and New Orleans Saints Quarterback Karl Sweetan, 29, and Wayne Boswell today in connection with an alleged attempt to sell a National Football League play book.

There was no immediate information on what team the play book belonged to, nor was it known who the prospective buyer was.

NEW YORK — A Jacksonville, Fla., attorney filed a $5 million suit in federal court Thursday and named as defendants the Los Angeles Rams and Baltimore Colts of the National Football League, NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle, the estate of late Rams' owner Dan Reeves and two co-executors of Reeves' Estate.

The attorney and Businessman, Hugh E. Culverhouse, alleged in the suit that he made an agreement to purchase the Rams for $17 million last month and in conversations with Milton Levitt and Richard Caroon, co-executors of Reeves' Estate, it was agreed that the parties meet on June 6 to formally execute the agreement.

But Culverhouse says Levitt refused to accept a check for $100,000, saying the owners of the Rams had decided to keep the team "within the football family" and that they were going to sell the Franchise to Carroll Rosenbloom, owner of the Colts and Robert Irsay, a Chicago businessman.

Culverhouse charged the defendants with conspiracy and anti-trust law violations, alleging they have "suppressed competition and monopolized the business of professional football."

Yachting

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles-Tahiti Trans-Pacific Yacht Race narrowed down near the finish Thursday to three identically handicapped boats — Pen Duick III, Aries and Concerto.

The final results were not expected to be known until later when six of the seven starters finally arrive at Papeete.

But late Thursday Pen Duick III was 28 miles ahead of Aries and 57 miles ahead of Concerto.

Fourth in the projected handicap was Siete with Min Sette Fifth. The ketch Greybeard, which arrived Wednesday, was expected to finish sixth in the handicap standings.

Hockey

CHICAGO — Marcel Provonost, a 20-year veteran of the National Hockey League, signed a two-year contract Thursday to coach the World Hockey Association Chicago Cougars.

Pronovost, 42, spent 16 seasons with the Detroit Red Wings before closing out his NHL career with four seasons as a member of the Toronto Maple Leafs. He has been head coach of the minor league Tulsa Kings, a Toronto farm club, for the past three years. No contract terms were disclosed.

Golf

HORSHAM, Pa. — Jane Blalock and Suzie Maxwell Berning led the women golfers scheduled to tee off today in the $32,000 George Washington Golf Classic at Hidden Springs Country Club.

Miss Blalock comes to Hidden Springs armed with a court order allowing her to play with the Ladies Professional Golf Association. She was suspended earlier this year by the LPGA for alleged cheating, but she is fighting the move in court.

The 26-year-old Miss Blalock won the 54-hole tournament last year, and she returns as this year's leading money winner on the women's tour.

Suzie Maxwell Berning, the winner of last Sunday's U.S. Women's Open, will be Miss Blalock's toughest challenger.

Pirates' 'Laugher' After Marathon Go

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Laughter comes easily to a first place team and the Pittsburgh Pirates, a bit ragged after a 17-inning 7-3 triumph over the Houston Astros, were in the mood Thursday night to let the good times roll.

The Pirates' locker room in the Astrodome was filled with its usual mixture of English and Spanish chatter, intermingled with heavy gusts of laughter and the silly giggling of a slightly built Puerto Rican, around whom reporters were gathered with questions and pencils poised.

The Puerto Rican was Ramon Hernandez, a 5-foot 9, 160-pound lefthanded relief pitcher who, playing for his third team in four years, seems to have found a home in Pittsburgh and may be just the man the Pirates need to sew up their third straight National League East championship.

Thursday night Hernandez excelled in a way the Pirates, and certainly the Astros, never expected him to as he led off the 17th inning with a line drive double off the left field wall to ignite a four-run rally that ended the exhausting 4 1-2 hour struggle.

Thursday night he pitched four shutout innings and gave up only one hit after he was summoned to relieve Giusti, who had pitched six innings of three-hit shutout ball.

The Los Angeles Dodgers, paced by shortstop Bill Russell's four RBI's and third baseman Jim Lefebvre's three-run homer, continued their hitting explosion against Montreal as they drubbed the Expos 11-3 with a 13-hit attack.

Dusty Baker's two-run homer highlighted a four-run third inning and provided the winning margin as the Atlanta Braves held off a ninth inning Chicago rally to beat the Cubs 4-3.

GOLF NOTES

Four Marinites Join State Amateur Meet

Four Marin County golfers will be in the 200-man California Amateur Golf Championship tournament at Cypress Point Club and at Pebble Beach Monday and Tuesday.

Sausalito's Bob Cranston and Richard Thompson, Novato's Ray Leach and San Rafael's Mat Palacio Jr. are among those with handicaps of four and under who will be qualifying the two days by playing 18 holes each day.

The 64 lowest gross scores will then comprise the Championship Flight with match play of 18 holes beginning Wednesday at Pebble Beach. Action concludes Sunday, July 16 with a 36-hole final match.

The next 80 low qualifiers will compete in one of five flights of 16 players each at Pebble Beach and Spyglass Hill Golf course.

Firecrackers and barrel-bombs were not the only noisy forms of excitement July 4th; woods and irons smacking golf balls were also heard, particularly at Meadow Club in Fairfax. At that locale Lou Helms won the Meadow Club Flag Tourney by reaching within four inches of the 19th hole.

FISH AND GAME

Noisy Boats Scare Even Ocean Fish

By AL GIDDINGS

I can feel the gnashing of teeth from those anglers fishing for stripers over the Fourth. Very few fish were caught at the Brothers Islands or at the Sisters, even though I said "fish were in those areas." Using the term "were" is probably the most correct.

If you were one of the anglers out there on the Fourth, think about this. Fish are scary, wild creatures. Having 30 to 40 boats with motors roaring continually above would most certainly move the fish out. At the Sisters it was a continual traffic jam. The noise and the din probably scared those fish to much quieter areas.

I believe this even happens in salmon fishing in as large a place as in the ocean. In the shallow reef areas where the bass lay, it happens much more so. Keeping your boat, and if the other boats follow suit, off the reef area hot spots, letting the currents take your baits into the hot spots would help.

THOSE FISHERMEN who have the place all to themselves during the weekday lulls get the best results by far. Remember those days when the herring and anchovie runs brought the stripers in schools to these bait fish? The surface of the water just churned with the feeding activity.

If you circled the bait fish school letting your lure hit the edges, but keeping your boat away, it was easy to limit out quickly. Then, with the birds giving the spot away with their flying and diving tactics, other boats would come a-flying. Right through the schools they would go, scaring everything in sight, and causing everything to sound and move.

IF YOU ARE a trout fisherman, especially a stream fisherman, you wouldn't dream of plowing along through the creek holes when fishing. It took patience and stealth, with tactics like crawling on your belly to get close to a likely looking hole. Even shadows moving can scare a fish. That's why it is always better to fish on rainy days — movement, sounds and shadows are muffled by the rain. Solving the bass fishing problems is a tough nut to crack. If everyone is at The Brothers, try the Richmond Bridge or Red Rock, but get away from the din and noise for better results.

MORE THAN 19,000 stripers were tagged in the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta this spring for a tagging record. About 900 of these fish were tagged with $5 reward tags to provide an extra incentive for anglers to return them. In 1970, 1,089 tags were returned and in 1969, 1,850 were returned. The 1971 figures are not fully compiled as yet.

Department of Fish and Game creel checkers last year observed 18,653 bass caught by anglers. Four-hundred-and-thirty of the total were tagged — 231 with 1971 tags, 105 with 1970 tags, and 94 with 1969 tags.

FISHERIES biologists estimate there are about 1.5 million legal sized striped bass in the Sacramento-San Joaquin system. George Warner, chief of the Anadromous Fisheries Branch said that anglers harvest up to 35 per cent of the population each year; this is well within the safe range of harvest rates. He urged anglers to help assure the future of the striped bass resource by returning any tags they find this year, along with information as to when and where they caught the fish and whether they were fishing from a private boat, party boat, or from the shore. Send this information to the Department of Fish and Game, 1416 Ninth Street, Sacramento.

Olympic Runner's Worries

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI)—Steve Prefontaine is hard to figure.

First, Oregon's Super Duck hits you with all the confidence in the world, and then if you let him talk long enough, he shifts gears.

Thursday, after winning his heat in the 5,000 meter run at the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials, Prefontaine said things such as:

"I felt just great. I hope I feel the same way Sunday. I needed this race for a lot of reasons. Mostly it was the psychological factor. When you have rested for four or five days, you wonder if you still have it."

WORRY

Then, after going over his 5,000 victory, and a qualifying fifth place finish by George Young in the other section of the metric mile, Prefontaine, who hasn't been beaten at 5,000 or three miles in three years, started to worry.

"He (Young) must be in good shape or he wouldn't be here," said Prefontaine. "He didn't wear himself out, he ran a smart race."

Naturally, Prefontaine is worried about Young, the soon-to-be 35-year-old Casa Grande, Ariz., school teacher most people think is the best distance runner in America.

'RUN FASTER'

"I'll just have to run faster Sunday in the final," said Prefontaine after checking his 13:15.2 against Young's 14.11.6. "It could be faster than Young wants to go."

Prefontaine isn't happy and probably never will be until he has beaten Young, third in the steeplechase and 16th in the marathon at the 1968 Olympics. Sunday, he gets his first crack at the veteran shooting for his fourth Olympic berth.

There were no surprises during Thursday's trials program, devoted also to qualifying in the 110-meter high hurdles, 400 meter dash and 1500 meter runs.

ADVANCED

Rod Milburn, Willie Davenport, Leon Coleman and Tom Hill all advanced as expected through the first two rounds of the high hurdles, while in the 400 John Smith, Lee Evans, Wayne Collett and Vince Matthews made it through the first round without incident.

It was more of the same in the 1,500 where Dave Wottle of Bowling Green, who tied the world record by winning the 800 meter run last Saturday, and Jim Ryun, the world record holder at 880 yards, mile and 1,500 meters, won their heats with strong finishing kicks.

Ryun, shut out in the 800 and needing to finish in the first three of the 1,500 to make it to the Olympics, closed with a 55.2 second lap for a 3:45.7 victory. Wottle, as usual, laid back in the pack, then came on with a 56.6 final lap to win in 3:43.7.

BEST TIME

Duncan MacDonald, the former Stanford sub four-minute miler, turned in the best time in the 1,500 qualifying, taking his heat in a flashy 3:43.6. The other 1,500 meter heat winner was David Roberts—in 3:48.0.

Ken Swenson, who finished third in the 800, and Mark Winzenreid, who was out of the money in the half mile, both scratched from the 1,500. That means Winzenreid, considered one of America's best at either distance, will not be going to Munich in August.

Today's schedule is a crowded one as the trials head into the homestretch. On tap are the first and second rounds of the 200 meter dash, the second round of the 400 meter dash, semi-finals in the 110 hurdles, 400 and 1,500, and qualifying in the hammer and long jump.

Deming's Tire defeated Fabulous Aliens 19-11 in San Rafael Recreation Department adult softball league competition last night at Albert Park.

Reserve Clause Future In Doubt

HOUSTON (UPI)—Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn says there is a strong possibility the controversial reserve clause in baseball players individual contract will be modified when the owners write a new contract with the Players' Association.

Kuhn made the comment during a news conference Thursday. He was in Houston meeting with owners to review collective bargaining procedures and to determine the manner of negotiating the players' contract, which expires Dec. 31, and the television contract, which expires next March 31.

Marvin Miller, attorney for the Players Association, wants a reserve clause allowing a player to become a free agent after a certain period of time.

Baseball players are not able to play out their option now in the same way as football players. Catcher Ted Simmons of the St. Louis Cardinals refused to sign a contract this year and is playing under a contract renewed by the club.

Kuhn said he hoped Simmons would sign a contract before next year but if he didn't, it would be possible for the Cardinals to renew the contract again. He said this is a step approved by the league president, not the comissioner's office.

Kuhn said he was concerned that attendance in the American League was considerably lower than in the National League. He blamed it on the antiquity of American League parks, but he said this should be partially remedied with new parks in Kansas City next year, in Detroit by 1975 and the refurbishing of Yankee Stadium in New York by 1976.

Kuhn, in a speech to a civic club, said he expected the major leagues to become more international in scope in a few years. "Japan could put together two major league teams today if we could solve the transportation problem," Kuhn said. "We're also looking toward Toronto, Mexico City and Caracas. There also is a possibility of teams in Europe, especially Italy and Holland."

Oklahoma Takes Title Of Frazier

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The Oklahoma Boxing Commission no longer considers Joe Frazier heavyweight champion of the world, saying Frazier has failed to defend his title against any of the top 15 ranked boxers for 16 months.

The state commission withdrew its recognition of Frazier Thursday, and shortly afterward a match was scheduled Oct. 3 in Oklahoma City to decide the new world champion.

The match, which was contingent on agreement between promoter Pat O'Grady and Sports Enterprises Inc. (SEI) of Washington, would be between George Foreman and Oscar Bonavena.

Javelin Mark Set

STOCKHOLM (UPI)—Janis Lusis of Russia broke the listed world javelin record Thursday with a throw of 308 feet. The 1968 Olympic javelin champion cracked the old mark of 302 feet, 1 3-4 inches set by Jorma Kinnunen of Finland in 1969.

WITH TWINS

Manager Role For Quilici

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI)—Spunky Frank Quilici, hoping to pull the floundering Minnesota Twins back together again, makes his debut as manager tonight when the Twins host the New York Yankees in the first of a three-game series.

Quilici was named manager of the Twins for the remainder of the season Thursday after president Calvin Griffith fired manager Bill Rigney. Rigney piloted the Twins since the 1970 season.

Quilici, 33, former utility infielder noted more for his fielding and spark than his hitting ability, said his big job was to try to get the Twins back together after they nosedived to third place in the American league west, 9 1-2 games behind Gakland.

"I think the biggest thing is getting togetherness back on the ball club," he said, pointing out that "lackadaisical errors have hurt us."

Quilici, a native of Chicago, broke into organized baseball in 1961 after playing college ball at Western Michigan university. After several years in the minor leagues he was called up in 1967 on a permanent basis.

He was removed from the active player roster before the 1971 season and made a coach.

He said he felt his years in the Minnesota organization would help him as a manager, despite his youth and inexperience.

"I don't have to learn about the players' personalities," Quilici said. "I've known many of them a long time. Now I can sit down and point out some of the weak points and some of the strong points."

He said he feels "we don't have anyone on our ball club not willing to pay the price" of working toward a pennant.

"The thing I'm hoping is that they'll do this themselves," he said. "I feel now, even when we were winning, we were making mistakes. We need constant reminders day in and day out to keep us constantly dedicated to baseball."

the net gave Mrs. King advantage and then another casual forehand into the net gave her the break. She made no mistake in the next game to take the set.

NERVES

Both girls had shed their earlier nerves and there were only six points lost in the first six service games of the second set.

Evonne was 40-15 in the seventh game when she again lost her concentration. She allowed Billie Jean to come to deuce and saved two break points but then presented her opponent with her third advantage with a bad stroke.

Billie Jean stumbled when returning a second ball and Evonne casually put a forehand into the net when going for a line placement. It was the kind of stroke park players make. A backhand pass completed the break.

PLACEMENT

Billie Jean held to 15 for 5-3 and in the next game hit two perfect backhand's down the line and a forehand placement to reach match point. Another peach of a backhand and it was all over.

Billie Jean's fourth win tied the old record held by her compatriot Louise Brough, who achieved the feat in 1955, the year Tony Trabert beat Denmark's unseeded Kurt Nielsen to give America its last double.

For Miss Goolagong, who never displayed convincing form during the tournament, the runner-up spat was worth $3,380.

Meanwhile, the Giants scored single tallies in four different innings. Bobby Bonds singled and later scored on a sacrifice fly in the first and Fuentes doubled in the second and scored on Fran Healey's single.

BONDS

Bonds doubled in the fifth and scored on Gary Maddox' single and the Giants scored in the eighth when Maddox singled, advanced to third on a pair of groundouts and eame home on a wild pickoff attempt.

Arnie's Army In A Back Seat Role

FT. ERIE, Ont. (UPI)— "Arnie's Army" was geared for a full scale attack Thursday as the opening round of the $150,000 Canadian Open Golf Classic got underway, but somebody stole the arsenal. His name was Bunky Henry.

The 28-year-old Henry, once a place-kicker on the Georgia Tech football team, shot a blazing six-under par 65 to take a one-stroke lead over Tom Sanderson, who fired five-under 66.

SCORES

Sam Snead, Sam Adams, Gay Brewer, and Lou Graham were all two shots off the pace with 67's. Bruce Crampton and Bob Smith came in with 68's while defending champion Lee Trevino was grouped with four others at 69, two-under par.

Arnold Palmer, whose "Army" was in full-force some 700 strong early Thursday when he teed off, shot an even par 71 — Napa's Ron Cerrudo carded a 74.

Henry eagled the 12th hole when he sank a 60-footer out of the rough, along with five birdies in his hot first round; by the time he got to the 12th, however, he was well on his ay to a new course record.

HENRY SAYS

Henry, who captured the Canadian Amateur title in 1965, said he believed an "eight or nine under par" would be good enough to take the title and the $30,000 top prize.

"I was happy to get away with a bogey there," he said in reference to the fifth hole when he shot a bogey-four after his four-iron tee shot hit the lake.

"This is a really great golf course," he said. "In fact it's by far the best course I've played in Canada."

PALMER

Palmer, who said his "Army" behaved "very well," was not impressed with the low scores being registered in the first round. "I think this is a good golf course," the 42-year-old Palmer said.

"The fact that one man shot a 65 doesn't mean a thing," he said, and he added that a 275 would be "a good score" in the tournament.

Bob Panasiuk, of Tecumseh, Ont., was the only Canadian to break par as he fired a one-under 70 on the first 18 holes.

TREVINO

Trevino attracted somewhat of an army of his own during the afternoon. He rated the course as "very tough" and warned "if it doesn't rain the scores will be a lot higher."

Ageless Sam Snead, who won his first Canadian Open in 1938, six years before Henry was born, joked with newsman after finishing the opening round in fine fashion.

"Well, here comes the sun," he said as sunshine broke through usually cloudy skies. "Trevino just teed off, didn't he?"

Bicycle Record

Marc Horowitz, 18, of Mill Valley, broke his own course record Wednesday when he completed 10-mile time trials on his bicycle, on Paradise Drive, with a time of 23:36. A week earlier the Marin Cyclists club member set the mark with a time of 23:54. The time trial was sanctioned by the American Bicycle League of America.

Bank Of Marin Plans Office In Pacheco Plaza This Fall

Bank of Marin will open its eighth office this fall, probably in September, at the Pacheco Plaza Shopping Center at 476 Ignacio Boulevard, Ignacio.

Remodeling is under way at the northwest corner of the shopping center, near Safeway store. The bank will occupy 2,000 square feet in the 65,000-square-foot shopping center developed by Walter F. Kiechkhefer.

Bank of Marin, with headquarters in San Rafael, has six offices in Marin County and one in Petaluma.

ANOTHER 74 UNITS of apartments, renting for $165 to $185 per month, will go up on Canal Street in San Rafael by the end of this year.

Continental Development Co. of Walnut Creek will build the two and three-story structures on two acres of land at 240 Canal Street. Sasha Maloff, president of the company, said all units will be one bedrooms. The apartments renting for $185 will have water frontage on the San Rafael Canal.

This is one of several projects under construction by Maloff in Marin County. Others include the 90-unit Cowbarn Apartments on South Novato Boulevard in Novato; 75 townhouses at Venetia Cove on North San Pedro Road in Santa Venetia; and a 35-unit apartment in the 1700 block of Lincoln Avenue in San Rafael.

Carlton's Village Sportswear for men at Strazberry Town and Country Village at Alto changed hands this week, but the same name and services will be coninued under new management.

New owner is Stanley Tropp of Oakland, who has had more than 20 years experience in men's clothing, mostly in New York.

"We will keep the same fine stuff that we now have," said Tropp. "We will continue to cater to the gentlemen of Marin and hope to enhance our supply with a few more fine imports." Tropp's wife, Thelma, will be associated with him in the store.

Former owner Harry Zeplowitz of Tiburon operated the store for four years. He plans to retire.

Tropp was buyer and merchandise manager for Amfac, which operates department store chains in San Francisco. Before that, he was in New York as merchandise manager of men's apparel for Gaylord's Nationa' Corporation. He also worked for other major firms such as Interstate Stores and Macy's.

"I'm a transplanted New Yorker who has fallen in love with the Bay Area," said Tropp. He and his wife plan to move into Marin as soon as they can find a home.

FRANK B. PEEBLES of San Rafael has been appointed San Francisco regional counsel for the Federal Highway Administration of the U.S. Department of Transportation. Peebles was assistant regional counsel for the past 12 years.

GOLDEN WEST Savings and Loan Association, which has a branch at 36 Corte Madera Center in Corte Madera, has opened its newest branch office in Sunnyvale, at 475 South Mathilda Avenue.

Golden West operates a total of 23 offices, with four additional branches scheduled for opening this year.

WILLIAM C. WOOLSTON Co. has been formed in Mill Valley to distribute a unique closed-circuit television system called Mini-Trans, which uses no cables.

The corporation, headed by William C. Woolston, is located at 33 Reed Boulevard. Other officers are Mrs. Woolston as secretary-treasurer, and their son, Clark Woolston, as vice president. Woolston is publisher of a trade journal called Pacific Coast Review.

Unlike the conventional closed-circuit TV, the new system uses no cable between the TV screen and the receiver, which means less cost and less bulk. The entire system can be carried in a briefcase.

The Mini-Trans can be used for all types of surveillance or monitoring operations such as in mining, news gathering, aerial photography, security, or forest fire control. The Mini-Trans was developed in San Diego by Dan McLeod. Woolston Co. is the sole distributor.

Market On Mixed Side At Opening

NEW YORK (UPI)—Prices were mixed in moderate trading during the first two hours today on the New York Stock Exchange.

Wall Street experts said the market's reaction reflected a mixed news background in which the government, though reporting a sharp drop in unemployment for June, also noted another increase in the wholesale price index.

Norton Simon led the most active stocks on tha NYSE and was 3-8 lower to 33 7-8 on 104,100 shares.

Prices also were mixed in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

On the Big Board, Curtiss-Wright, holder of the North American rights to the revolutionary Wankel engine, did not open for trading in the morning session. The issue came under a heavy selling assault late Thursday following a statement by a Chrysler Corp. executive that the engine was overrated. It lost 6 points in the session.

Steel issues were mostly unchanged, while auto stocks were mixed. General Motors and Ford gained 1-4 each while Chrysler lost 1-2.

Eastman Kodak jumped 1 1-8, Allied Chemical 3-8.

Superior Oil added 1, Atlantic Richfield lost 1 1-2. Most other oil issues were mixed in fractions.

Rails, airlines and aircrafts were mixed in fractions. American Airlines eased 7-8. United Aircraft lost 3-4. Boeing tacked on 1-4.

Northgate's PayLess Will Open Tomorrow

The large new PayLess Drug Store at Northgate Mall in Terra Linda, next to the new Sears complex, will open its doors tomorrow at 9 a.m. with a brief ribbon-cutting ceremony.

The newest PayLess one-stop family center is the 39th California store in the Oakland-based super drug chain. It has 30,000 square feet of selling space, and is completely self service. The store is fully air-conditioned, with 2,500 parking spaces in the big Northgate Mall parking area.

Store manager is Leon G. Cramer Jr., who has been with PayLess for 14 years. He started with PayLess in Oakland in 1958, moved to the Hayward and Fremont stores, managed a PayLess in San Jose, and was manager and area supervisor of the Fresno PayLess until his appointment to Marin.

Cramer said the new Northgate store will have the following departments: prescription and health aids, sporting goods, cosmetics and toiletries, records, camera and photographic services, toys and games, hardware, paint, automtoive supplies, liquor, housewares, small appliances and a garden shop.

Chief pharmacist is Donald Williams.

LEON G. CRAMER JR.
New manager

The company also plans two more stores in Northern California this year — one in South Lake Tahoe and the other in Salinas. The first PayLess was opened by L.J. Skaggs in Tacoma, Wash., in 1932. The chain now has 2,600 employees working in 39 PayLess stores in California and eight stores in Hawaii. President, chairman of the board and chief executive officer is William L. Gherra, a 28-year veteran with PayLess.

'Career Apparel' Linked To Modern Image-Making Effort

By NANCY PHILLIPS
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

CHICAGO — Business has become clothes conscious, and both the employee and the apparel industry are reaping the benefits of its expanded wardrobe.

By 1980 it's estimated that 12 million persons in such businesses as airlines, banks, direct selling companies, utilities, food service, hotel and motel personnel and retail organizations will be meeting the public in career apparel.

This is the name for the concept which manufacturers don't like to call "uniforms." Career apparel is tied in with the modern efforts at image-making and instant identification. Intended to help the growing number of service-oriented businesses to "look their part," career apparel has taken its lead from the airlines, which long ago created fashionable and functional clothing for stewardesses, quickly identifying them with a particular air line.

Howard A. Wolfe, executive director of the Career Apparel Institue, New York points out that though it's hard to estimate the size of the market, it is thought that leading cutters and mills had sales of $60 million last year.

E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., Inc., makers of Dacron polyester fabrics used in career apparel, estimates the potential market for tailored career apparel at 10 million to 12 million white-collar workers who by 1980 would need 40 million garments annually at a cost of $700 million.

"This type of clothing," explained Jules L. Bliss, director of career fashions for F.W. Means & Co., "must withstand daily wear. Not only is it important that the fabrics be colorfast, abrasion resistant, easily cleanable, and wrinkle free, but the thread, linings, waistbands, and other elements in their manufacture also must withstand as much as two years of daily use."

Most programs are sold for a two-year period, he explained, pointing out that the career apparel may be sold outright to customers, leased to them, or may be offered on a lease basis with maintenance provisions.

The Harris Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, leases its career apparel with the maintenance package, and it has gone a step further with the design of the apparel fgr men and women tellers, messengers, and others seen by the public. Theirs was designed through a competition among students in the Fashion Design Department of the Art Institute of Chicago.

Women have seven-piece costumes that they may alternate at will. Men have two sports coats and four ties. Cost of the program, according to William N. Flay, Harris vice-president, is $21 per month for the women, $13 monthly for the men, paid by the bank.

He explains that the organization went into career apparel "for better communication with our customers. To many people the teller is the bank and that's as it should be. We hire tellers who are competent as tellers, and by clothing them appropriately, we think this is the best means fo communicating that to our customers.

Employees like the costumes and the money they release for their own casual wardrobes, they told this reporter.

In explaining why Bond Stores, Inc., has gone this direction, Lawrence S. Firestone, director of career apparel, pointed to advantages to both employer and employee. "For the employee there's the elimination of the initial outlay for a working wardrobe ... the reduction of insecurity of what to wear on the job."

For the employer, "It's an excellent substitute employer benefit," he added.

Like Bond Stores and its manufacturing organization, Hart, Shaffner & Marx points to the importance of a network of stores where the garments can be professionally fitted and altered, and where matching costumes can be available over a period of the program. Then new employees can be outfitted easily to match others.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Kodak Is Stock Well Worth Keeping Presently

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I have 26 shares of Eastman Kodak (NYSE) which pay only $1.04 a share. I now have a profit and wonder if I should transfer to an investment with a higher yield. — E.D.

A. Because of the extra dividend paid in January, the indicated dividend rate for EK shares is $1.37 rather thar $1.04. While this provides only a 1.1 per cent income return, at the current all-time high trading levels, shares have increasej in value 30 per cent since January. The strong market performance reflects EK's favorable first quarter results (earnings gained 31 per cent), and introduction of a pocket-size instamatic camera which has been very favorably received. With earnings expected to reach $3.20 a share, EK is well worth holding unless you are really strapped.

Q. Please give me your opinion of the stability of the dividend paid by New England Telephone and Telegraph (NYSE). I need stocks that have good yields for income. — E.D.

A. Although first half earnings of $1.13 a share failed to cover the 59 per cent per share quarterly dividend rate, the payment appears secure. Over the last five years a very liberal 87 per cent of earnings has been paid out in dividends. If net this year reaches the projected $2.80 a share level, pay out at the current $2.36 a share dividend rate would be 84 per cent for the year.

Telephone rate increases of $66 million annually, which were not fully reflected in the first six months, are expected to offset sharply rising expenses over the balance of the year.

A $250,000 Watson Tax Drive Gift

I-J Special Report

LOS ANGELES — The Watson tax limitation initiative has gained $250,000 in financial support from 60,000-member California Real Estate Association.

The association board voted the special election fund during a four-day meeting last week at the Disneyland Hotel in Anaheim, according to Joseph B. Carnahan of Northridge, association president.

The money will be used, he said, to make advance commitments for advertising, television time, billboards, and to develop literature.

The so-called Watson initiative will be on the November ballot. It would limit local property taxes to approximately $7 for each $100 assessed valuation. Counties, cities and schools would each get $2, intercounty districts would get 50 cents and special districts — irrigation, mosquito abatement, etc. — 50 cents.

The legislature would have to provide $825 per pupil for education in the schools. There is provision for retiring bonded debt and floating new school bonds with approval of the voters.

No welfare could be supported by property taxes.

To replace revenue lost in the shift, sales tax would go up from 5 per cent to 7 per cent. Corporate income taxes would go from 7.6 per cent to 11 per cent, with no increase in personal income tax. Banks and insurance companies would pay the same taxes as other corporations. Cigarette taxes would go up one-half cent to one cent per cigarette, and liquor taxes would go up 50 cents per gallon. There is an oil and mineral severance tax.

Carnahan said association members in 172 local boards of Realtors throughout the state will be active in the tax limitation initiative campaign, working with the California Farm Bureau Federation, California Apartment House Owners Association, Cattlemen's Association and other supporters.

Proposed Richardson Bay Sanitary Outlay Zooms

A $495,634 preliminary budget for 1972-73, up 47 per cent over last year's budget, has been submitted to the Richardson Bay Sanitary District board.

According to board secretary Eber D. Russell, the proposed budget will increase the tax rate of the district by about 20 cents to 65 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Operating expenses were budgeted at about $151,000, while capital outlay was figured at $344,000.

The increase in capital outlay, said Russell, was required to meet the stringent water quality standards set by the Regional Water Quality Board.

The budget includes $130,000 to construct a holding tank at the Ricardo Road pumping station and additional funds for a new sewer main beneath Highway 101, near Richardson Bay Bridge.

New pumps, new sewer lines and a 9 per cent salary increase for the district's four employees are also included in the proposed budget, said Russell.

At a budget hearing Wednesday night, the board added about $23,000 to cover additional legal fees, professional services, utilities, repairs for the sludge dewatering facilities and smoke bomb testing.

The board will hold another budget hearing and, possibly, approve the preliminary budget at its meeting July 18.

On Monday night, the board also passed an ordinance which increases the district's sewer connection fees by 50 per cent.

The new connection fees — which are levied on a sliding scale according to the number of fixtures in each living unit — could be applied to about 450 potential permits, according to board member Jules Winkleman.

ABC Thinking Big; Not The First Time

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—ABC-TV, smallest of the major commercial television networks, is trying hard these days to get across the impression that it has finally achieved parity in ratings and quality with CBS-TV and NBC-TV. And, in fact, that's true.

The only thing is, however, that it is not the first time this has happened. But it does make a swell case for ABC-TV's relatively new top management team. And that new team is doing and planning things in a big way to drive home the idea that this time ABC-TV is for real, and that its executives are not just using it for a stepping stone to other positions such as production jobs in Hollywood.

Lest anyone be overwhelmed by the ABC-TV publicity department's ebuillience, it might be well to remember that the network had some pretty hot ratings streaks before in the years of "The Untouchables," "77 Sunset Strip," "Ben Casey" and "Batman."

It also aimed for, and achieved, quality in the past in such series as "ABC Stage 67"; the Jacques Cousteau underwater specials (still running) and a multi-part production about the life of Winston Churchill, in documentary form. And, for many months, ABC-TV was the only commercial network to have a weekly series on the Vietnam War.

So there have been many things in the past for ABC-TV to boast of. But there's no denying a feeling of solidity is currently emerging that wasn't too noticeable before. And the network's plans for the coming season indicate it is going full steam ahead to build its image:

For example, in the works is a production of Eugene O'Neill's monumental autobiographical drama, "Long Day's Journey into Night," which will star Laurence Olivier and Constance Cummings.

In addition, says ABC-TV, Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt will be the subject of a brief series of "dramatic productions" that would constitute six to eight hours of programming.

The productions will be based on the bestselling book "Eleanor and Franklin" by Joseph Lash. The book is based on the private papers of the former first lady, and, as ABC-TV notes, tells of her relationship with the World War II president during 45 years of marriage.

Other material for the series will be drawn from "Eleanor: The Years Alone," a new Lash biography that will be published this summer. And David Susskind will produce the programs for talent Associates-Norton Simon Industries, with Franklin Roosevelt Jr. as a consultant.

Besides these projects, ABC-TV has signed Jack Paar to do specials, and the network will introduce periodic after-school programs for children, something neither of its big competitors is doing.

ABC-TV is also giving veteran newsman Harry Reasoner a weekly, Saturday night, dinner-time, 30-minute program of his own.

Reporter Is Facing Jail; Won't Talk

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI)—Reporter Peter Bridge was found in contempt of court Thursday for refusing to answering Essex County grand jury questions and ordered to return to court today prepared to go to jail.

Judge Curtis Meanor of Superior Court found Bridge in contempt for refusing to answer five grand jury questions concerning the Newark Housing Authority (NHA). Bridge was ordered to jail for the duration of grand jury term, which runs until Sept. 15, or until he agrees to answer the questions.

A June 29 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of Branzburg vs. Hayes, Meanor said, removed any constitutional questions in Bridge's case. The Supreme Court decision held that reporters may be required to answer grand jury questions.

Bridge was subpoenaed to testify about a story he wrote in May for the Evening News of Newark in which Housing Authority Commissioner Pearl Beatty claimed she was offered a $10,000 bribe by an unknown man to influence her vote for NHA executive director.

The newsman answered some questions, but refused to answer others, claiming a reporter's privilege to remain silent in order to protect confidential sources.

The unanswered questions included whether Miss Beatty had described the alleged bribe offer to Bridge, whether Bridge was told about specific acts of harassment to other commissioners, and whether the commissioner told him who the unidentified man wanted her to help elect as executive director.

Superior Court Judge James R. Giuliano ruled that Bridge had waived his rights to remain silent by making it clear in his story that his source was Commissioner Beatty. The ruling was upheld by an appeals court. Giuliano then ordered Bridge to appear before Meanor for a contempt hearing.
